Where Your Money Went—Cancer Fund Share Is 20 Per Cent of AUF

This is the second article in the series, "Where Your Money Went," concerning contributions collected by the All University Fund. The articles will explain each of the charities that AUF donated to this year, and the various purposes the charities serve.

By Emmie Limpo
Twenty percent of the money collected during the AUF drive went to the American Cancer Society.

This charity is the only national organization supported by the people's gifts, battling cancer on three fronts: research, education and service to patients. It provides facilities for diagnosis and treatment and backs research in more than 100 laboratories and universities.

Last year 400,000 educational pamphlets about cancer were distributed in Nebraska. The Society estimates that about one-third of all cancer deaths can be prevented through education and early diagnosis.

Twelve tumor clinics are maintained in Nebraska. Twenty-four thousand dollars of the money raised in Nebraska last year went directly to Nebraska institutions for research and clinical instruction.

Approximately 1,000 scientists are working in 152 hospitals, universities and laboratories supported by the American Cancer Society. Some 3,000 younger men and women are serving as technicians or being trained for larger responsibilities in the cancer field.

The Society estimates that cancer strikes one person out of every five. Approximately 335,000 men and women in the United States have lost their lives because of the disease.

The All University Fund also gave to World University Service, LARC School, the Lincoln Community Chest, the Lancaster County Committee for Crippled Children and the Muscular Dystrophy Associations of America.

Dentists Get Green Light On Expansion Plans

Plans to expand and advance in keeping abreast of changes in dentistry have led the College of Dentistry to express need for additional faculty and complete occupancy of Andrews Hall.

The University administration, advised of the plans and objectives, has given a "green light" for the expansion.

"We were told we could start our expansion in '61," said Dr. Ralph Ireland, Dean of the College of Dentistry.

"My understanding is that eventually we will have all of Andrews Hall," he continued. The dean stressed that these plans are all quite long range and tentative.

A. C. Breckenridge, Dean of Faculties, was unavailable for comment. The Dental College now occupies the third floor and about two-fifths of the second floor.

With the acquisition of additional class room, laboratory and clinical space, the College will be able to accept 40 to 45 students each year in the freshman class instead of the present freshman acceptance of 34 students per year.

Requests from alumni have resulted in a tentative two-year course for dental hygienists as soon as space is available. Through more usage of the services of the dental hygienists, assistants and laboratory technicians, dentists will be able to extend their own services to more people.

A variety of short-post-graduate courses for practicing dentists in all phases of dentistry is planned which will assure patients of better service.

Lack of staff and funds has slowed down dental research, but with the recent increase in government appropriation for dental research and through the Fellowship and Training Grants Program of the National Institutes of Health, research is expected to be speeded up.

Students at Iowa State College face a final exam situation similar to Nebraska's except for one point, its just the reverse.

The Iowa State administration has decided to begin final exams the day after classes are finished next fall.

An Iowa State Daily student opinion poll showed that students were generally antagonistic toward the idea.

Some typical comments were: "I think that finals would come too fast right after classes" . . . "We should have a better chance to study for finals than this setup would provide . . ."

Some students, however, remarked, "The sooner I get finals over with the better."
