

April 'Alumnus' Is Dedicated To the University Professor

University professors, their problems, rewards, goals and reasons for choosing this profession are discussed in April's issue of the "Nebraska Alumnus".

Nearly 700 persons make up the University faculty, with a breakdown showing 116 professors, 149 associate professors, 181 assistant professors, 101 instructors plus 150 part-time faculty members. At least five of these have been here 40 years.

In addition, some library personnel, staff members at the Curtis School of Agriculture, University Hospital residents and interns and the Agricultural Extension Service staff are considered as faculty members.

In answering the questions of who teachers are, why they're here, their rewards, retirement policies, future and what makes a good teacher, the article quotes Dr. Adam Breckenridge, dean of faculties, and Chancellor Clifford Hardin.

"A clue to a teacher's success is his ability to pass on some of his own passionate interest to others," Breckenridge said. "A good teacher must not only know his subject but he must know his subjects—his students—and he must like them enough to respect them."

Hardin is quoted on the subject of salaries.

"Despite our best intention, disparagement between the salaries paid Nebraska faculty and the faculties of comparable institutions from coast to coast has been widening. We are steadily losing the race."

Using Dr. Charles Patterson, chairman of the philosophy department, as a typical example, the article tells the story of a college professor.

"If I were sitting here and the whole outside world were indifferent to what I was doing, I would still want to be doing just what I am," Patterson said.

Reasons

His reasons for teaching? "I like to see students who will carry the intellectual spark into the world beyond my time. And I like to think that maybe I have something to do with this."

Patterson also listed the freedom in teaching as very valuable.

"A professor doesn't punch a time clock. He is allowed the responsibility of planning his own time and activities. This freedom of movement provides something very valuable—time to think and consider."

Double

Students in America's colleges and universities should double within ten years, the magazine says. Accordingly the number of teachers must double too.

"The securing and retaining of well-trained, effective teachers is the outstanding problem confronting all colleges today," one college president was quoted as saying.

The article calls for full public support measures and awareness to deal with the problem.

Annenberg Grad School Opens in Pa.

The University of Pennsylvania recently announced the opening of the Annenberg School of Communications, a graduate school instructing in all phases of communication. The first term will begin in September.

Experimental curriculum in telecasting, radio broadcasting, journalism, publishing and the film arts will be offered.

Recent college graduates and experienced professionals in communications media may apply for admittance.

The school will award a Master of Arts degree after one year of study.

Tuition of the school is $1,100 per year. Scholarships valued up to $2,500 are being offered.

Applicants should apply to Annenberg School of Communications, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia, Pa., for admission and scholarships by May 1.

Architecture Is TV Show Topic

"Contemporary Trends in Architecture" is featured in this week's program of "Channel 12 Presents" series.

The series is seen over KUON-TV each Friday at 8 p.m.

James Porter, associate professor of architecture, will lead a discussion on residential, school and ecclesiastical styles of architecture. He will use students' models and diagrams.

YW to Hold Coffee Hour

YWCA will hold a coffee hour Thursday for all persons interested in the Estes Conference. The conference is planned for June 7 to 13.

The group will meet Thursday in Rosa Bouton at 5 p.m. On Saturday YW members will attend a Neighborhood Conference at Omaha, from 9 to 4 p.m. where the national YWCA vice president will speak.

Cost of the conference is $4.25, which covers food, transportation and registration.

Last Call Issued For Council Pix

Wednesday is the last chance for students running for Student Council to have their pictures taken for campaign purposes, according to Marilyn Pickett.

The pictures will be taken from 1-4 p.m. in the photo lab in the basement of Burnett Hall.

Weather Bureau March May Be Due This April

By Carroll Kraus

It's time somebody wrote that fellow.

The weatherman, that is. Why, he has been ordering up some strange weather these past few weeks that hardly let a person know whether it's summer or winter, much less spring.

Snow Surprises

He really was sneaky when he poured that snow down on us the other day. But I guess he knew better than to order too much. There's just so much the student body can take before it gets up and to arms, or to the Weather Bureau at least.

And then yesterday—students trundled off to morning classes with winter-type coats (some of them) and then they found that it was too warm for the sheep-skins (not the diploma-type) when they emerged from their long a.m. labs.

It's hard to find a happy medium for wearing clothes anymore. The old standby coat (you know, the tan rain coat variety) is too cold to wear in the morning lately, and it's sort of out of place in the afternoon and just a bit too warm.

Planning Hard
Planning for gala events, now, isn't easy when you don't know if it's going to be a nice weekend, or snowy or windy or what.
