

All Staters Finish Fine Arts Courses

Three hundred Nebraska All Staters will wind up their annual summer session on the University of Nebraska campus this Saturday.

According to John Moran, General Director of All State, the course has fulfilled its purpose of giving outstanding art, speech and music students the opportunity to further their talents at NU, making full use of all facilities available.

The students attend seven to eight hours of classes daily in their respective fields. The art students do painting and sculpture work at NU's Morrill Hall.

Those in the field of music participate in band concerts, operettas and the chorus.

The speech students have a chance to participate in three 3-act plays as well as classes in original and interpretive speaking.

"The students work hard and they play hard," said Moran, "their recreational activities are well planned."

Recitals and concerts are included in the activities as well as parties, picnics and dances, he said.

According to Moran, one of the objects of the course is to acquaint the students with life on a college campus.

"They become familiar with typical college activities and are responsible to the Dean of Student Affairs," he said.

The students may receive 5 high school credit hours for attending the course which costs $80. Some organizations, however, award scholarships to outstanding students from their own communities.

Moran said that a recent poll taken among approximately 1,500 past All Staters shows that the course is very well liked.

Some comment from three students attending this year's session:

Dean Hawthorne, 15 of Trumbull: "I think it's well worth the money. I like the campus here and I think it's well organized. I'd very much like to attend the University."

Connie Diggs, 17, of Plattsmouth: "It's a wonderful opportunity, I think the campus is just beautiful, and would like to go to school here some day."

Jeanne Shaffer, 15, of York: "I think the course is very worthwhile. The campus is nice, but I think the buildings are spread out too much. I've thought quite a bit about going to the University, but I haven't made up my mind yet."

Director Announces Auditions

The University theater's annual summer production is a two-part effort this year according to Dr. J. B. Baldwin, acting director of the theater.

The two plays are "Taming of the Shrew" (which has already been presented) and "Laura," a sophisticated mystery that has appeared on Broadway, TV, and in the movies.

The auditioning of players for "Laura" will be held at Howell Memorial Theater on June 29 and 30 from 2-5 p.m., Dr. Baldwin said.

Dr. Baldwin, who is Associate Professor of Speech and Dramatic Art, is acting director in the absence of Dr. Dallas Williams who is recovering from an illness.

According to Dr. Baldwin, any regularly enrolled student at the University can audition for a roll in the play which is scheduled for July 24 and 25.

Symphony Orchestra To Be Seen

A series of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be seen this summer on the University TV station, KUON-TV. The one and a half hour programs will be seen on Fridays at 8 p.m.

In the first concert on July 17, noted music director Charles Munch conducts a program of music by Bach, Debussy and Beethoven.

Appearing as guest conductors during later programs are Sir John Barbirolli, Pierre Monteaux and Richard Burgin.

The concerts originate from the stage of Sanders Theater in Memorial Hall at Harvard University.

Sally Adams Accepts Post Of Editor

Sally Adams, editor of the "Nebraska Alumnus," has resigned to accept a similar post at Washington State College, Pullman, Wash. Her resignation, effective July 3, was announced this week by Arnold Magnuson, executive secretary of the University of Nebraska Alumni Association.

At Washington State, Miss Adams will serve as editor of the "Review," a quarterly magazine published by the college, and "Powwow," a quarterly news letter for WSC alumni. She will take over her new position in late July.

Miss Adams, a University of Nebraska graduate, formerly was an assistant in the University's Department of Public Relations and staff writer for the Lincoln Star.

She currently is serving as president of the Cornhusker Editors Association, board member and program editor of the Lincoln Community Playhouse and the Broadway Theater League of Lincoln, and vice president of Chapter FX, PEO.

Dr. Ralph Bedell to Speak At Round Table Luncheon

"The National Interest in Guidance and Counseling," will be the topic for discussion at the second Superintendents' Round Table Luncheon. Featured speaker at the July 2 meeting will be Dr. Ralph Bedell of the U.S. Department of Education and formerly on the University of Nebraska faculty.

Dr. Bedell's speech will relate the provisions of the National Defense Act to educational guidance.

In addition there will be a luncheon for the wives of the superintendents, featuring Mrs. Bedell, who has traveled extensively in the Orient and the South Pacific. She will give an illustrated presentation on "Lasting Impressions of the South Pacific."

Presently Dr. Bedell is a specialist for Higher Educational Programs in the U.S. Office of Education in Washington. Previous to this he served in the South Pacific for about three years as Secretary-General of the South Pacific Commission.

From 1938 to 1950, Dr. Bedell was Associate Professor and Professor of Educational Psychology and Measurements at the University of Nebraska.

Any superintendent or superintendent's wife may attend the luncheons by making reservations by June 29 with Dale K. Hayes, 406 Administration Building. The price of the luncheon, to be held at 12 noon in Parlors XYZ of the Student Union, is $1.35.

Visiting Professor

Basic Knowledge of Economics Essential Says Californian

A full professor at the University of Southern California is teaching a Home Economics course at Nebraska this summer. He—that's right, he—is Prof. E. Byrant Phillips, formerly of Lincoln.

The professor will teach three eight week courses here, including a joint Economics Seminar with Prof. Willis D. Moreland.

Since 1947 he has taught full time in the Home Economics department at USC and has written a book entitled "Consumer Economic Problems," and several dissertations on the subject.

Gullible Public

According to the professor, "the public as a whole is gullible and ill-informed, and a good economic education is needed to put them on an even keel with the products and prices we deal with today.

"The people here," he said, "seem quite interested in this, which shows their realization of it's importance."

Born in Lincoln, Prof. Phillips has taught at the public schools here and was superintendent of schools at Hallam. He received his Masters and Ph. D. at Nebraska.

After spending three and a half years in the Air and Signal Corps during World War II, he and his family moved to California where he taught at Los Angeles Jr. College, and part time at USC.

Impressed With Campus Phillips said that he was "especially impressed with the number of buildings and the size of the campus here."

He added, "everyone seems so congenial."

When asked how he compared the students at NU to those at USC, he said that he couldn't see much difference, but, he added, "I'll have to wait until I give a few tests before I can tell for sure."
