Enthusiasm, Vivaciousness Obvious Qualities of Martha Bigley, McCall's Honor Roll Teacher

She's not very tall, but what she lacks in height she makes up for with enthusiasm and vivaciousness. Who is she?—Mrs. Martha Bigley, named on McCall's Honor Roll of Teachers for 1959, who is on campus this summer teaching a class of fifth graders at Bancroft School!

Mrs. Bigley who was named Arkansas Teacher of the Year, is teaching a unit on Alaska and Hawaii. In teaching her unit Mrs. Bigley brings in all the fundamental subjects, such as music, art, language arts and math. In addition she uses films and resource people.

She is assisted by student teachers and has several college observers daily. Several elementary education methods classes visit her morning class.

Library Started

Last year Mrs. Bigley started a tape recording library of tape recordings that she had traded with schools all over the United States.

Mrs. Bigley said, "Children can't learn out of a book how people in other parts of the United States talk and what they are doing in school, so we put this information on a tape and send it somewhere in the United States and they send us back a recording of their children." Also included on the tapes are plays, songs or events of the particular school or community.

"The children enjoy hearing the regional accents," commented Mrs. Bigley. She hopes that next year the various schools will be able to "carry on conversations" by the tape recording method.

Idea From Pupil

Mrs. Bigley got her idea for the tape trading from a pupil in one of her classes who did not want to write a letter, but consented to "saying" it.

Mrs. Bigley is a fifth grade teacher in Magnolia, Arkansas, where at her request, both A.C.E. and Classroom Teachers were organized. She is the past president of the Arkansas Department of Classroom Teachers, a member of the Arkansas Education Association Legislation Committee and Co-chairman of Personnel Policies of the Governor's Advisory Council on Education. In addition she is a member of the Resolutions Committee of the South-Central Region of Classroom Teachers.
