The types of articles range from highly technical to the dean of the College writes humorous and fiction. Carroll Novicki, editor of the 1959 Blue Print, said that the most recent trend has been towards a balance of technical and non-technical articles.

Novicki said that in the past year an effort also has been made to standardize the makeup of the magazine with the result of the type styles and arrangement of headlines and articles being consistent in each issue.

The magazine is entirely self supporting, unlike many other magazines of its type. It is not subsidized by the school

Mandatory Subscription magazines at other colleges are supported by a mandatory subscription of every engineering student in the College of Engineering, he noted.

Other magazines are subsidized directly by the colleges. In the case where the subscription is mandatory, the amount of the subscription is usually included in the tuition to the college of en-
