Colorado May Lose Big 8 Title

Cyclones Question

Use of Frank Voss The University of Colorado could lose the Big Eight Conference championship due to two basketball protests.

Iowa State joined Nebraska in questioning basketball victories by the Buffaloes.

Cyclone officials screamed "foul" when the Buffs played a 6-8 center Roger Voss in a contest which the Colorado five won, 70-58, on Feb. 2.

The Iowa officials are questioning the eligibility of Voss, who was declared ineligible at the end of the first se-

Voss had no knowledge of his ineligibility because his grade had not been published, although second semester classes had started at Boulder.

"The matter is on the agenda for discussion at our meeting in Kansas City Feb. 25-26," said Reaves Peters, Big Eight Conference Commissioner.

"It was put on the agenda by Colorado," he added, "No official protest of the lowa State-Colorado game has been received in our office," Peters added.

Another topic of discussion before the conference meeting will be Nebraska's charges of a "slow clock" in its game with the Buffs at Boulder on Jan. 30.

The Huskers lost the game in an overtime, 62-57. The Nebraska squad was leading with seconds when a Colorado player made a basket forc- Ward Haylett's cinder squad ing the contest into extra finished a surprising third in Lengue 12-B.
