(Continued from Page 1) this matter in earnest, and it will take more than the ravings of a disappointed politician to make them turn back."

Durability Questioned

Next to be questioned by the newspapers was the durability of the physical plant at the University. "The Lincoln Leader," the Express reported, "says the University is about to fall, the foundation of the building having been discovered to be crumbling."

"The Journal comes vigorously to the defense of the building, saying that although the foundation of the north wall and the north wing has settled some, there is not the least danger of anything falling.

"The Board of Regents consider that the foundation should be repaired, however, and will take steps to that end immediately.

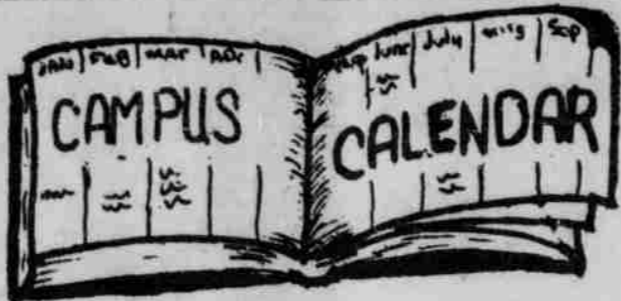

During the coming years, the University was to weather more criticism along the line of that delivered by the Omaha Herald.

Enrollment Consistent
As far as enrollment was concerned, it didn't increase during the first years, but averaged consistently about 100.

The State Medical Society and the Bar Assn. studied the possibilities of medical and law schools which were later established.

Facilities were improved each year, although salaries fell, the chancellor drawing only $3,000 by April 1, 1875, compared to $5,000 at the time of the University's opening.

But the school managed to stay on its feet and improve at the same time, now holding a position of respect and prestige among state universities across the country.

Predictions and displays of new styles will be on the stage of Howell Memorial Theatre Feb. 21 at 3 p.m. as the all-campus style show "Unmasking Fashion" is presented. Fifty-three models from home economics classes will display both their own creations and those made from patterns. Some have been copied from Paris designs. Two main silhouettes which are new for spring will be the shape of ease as in the new coatdress and the curved figure exemplified by the shirt-waist. One of the sports outfits has been modeled at St. Louis and other colleges. The designer also designed the shoes to match the outfit. Another feature has won national awards. Accessories of purses, gloves, hats, and jewelry are being provided by Lincoln department stores.

'Rockspring' Directs Plea To Guitarists

University Experiment 1 Theatre today hung out a sign reading "Guitar Player Needed."

Much of the ranch-country mood and story of R. G. Vliet's play "Rockspring," which will be seen in Howell Theatre March 3, 4 and 5, depends on some skillful playing of the guitar, setting mood and accompanying singing of one of the play's leading characters.

Vliet's play recently was named winner of the national playwriting contest sponsored by Nebraska Masquers and University Theatre. Its production is the culmination of months of artistic effort—actors, designers, production workers—and now, a musician.

Interested guitarists are asked to contact Dr. Joseph Baldwin, the play's director, at University Theatre, Ext. 3263.
