Tempest Caused Sunshine

...NU Men's Fuss Resulted in Public Admission

NU men planning to enjoy the 1960 Coed Follies production Friday night might say they were born under the right moon.

Eight years ago male students were not admitted to the Follies. The show was of women, by women and for women.

Stormed Theatre On Coed Follies night in 1952 troops of males stormed through the Nebraska theatre where the show was held. They had to be evicted by Lincoln and campus police before the coeds could continue the show.

That exhibition of interest opened the eyes of the University and the 1953 show was opened to the public.

Also at the show that year, six Eligible Bachelors were presented. They had been selected, after three days of campaigning, by an all-coed vote.

The 12 Eligible Bachelor finalists to be announced Friday night were selected by a board. The six winners will be revealed in the 1960 CORNHUSKER.

GUNSMOKED—Four poor Pi Phi's bite the dust during a rehearsal of their Coed Follies skit (top), but a "magic ingredient" brings them swinging back to life (bottom). All this practice terminates in the final production Friday night at 8 p.m. in Pershing Auditorium.

I's Versus i's Quarrel Develops in Men's Dorm Over HELP Program

I's and i's are waging a pamphlet war in Selleck Quadrangle as a result of a plan to develop more house organization in the Quad.

I's are the "Independents" in the dorm, according to Tom Eason, president of the Residence Association for Men, who are "the frustrated group of should be fraternity men who run around worrying about everything and doing nothing."

"Although they are active," he said, "they soon run into a wall of 'independents' and 50 per cent ideas on vast projects."

Eason added, "The Ram main cabinet is under the firm conviction that the I's are crying to be established and is initiating such action."

This is being done through a program known as "House Experiment in Long-range Planning (HELP)."

Opposing this plan are the i's who are those with a "boarding house complex," Eason said, who "firmly believe that Selleck is a place to eat, study and sleep. They are not followers but leaders in the fine art of doing nothing."

Recently, the RAM main cabinet authorized the publication of articles in Selleck reflecting the views of these two groups.

Since then, Eason has released five articles explaining his feelings along with plans for HELP.

The experiment calls for the use of Hitchcock and Benton houses "to unite the 'Independents' with interest, ambition and energy and give them a chance to show what they as a group can do," Eason said.

He said the HELP special committee counts on about 100 to 200 residents who would be interested in establishing such a program, 200 to 300 i's and 500 to 700 men who are in the middle.

It is hoped that the program will take hold and develop to the point where it includes all but a few houses of i's, he added.

Eason's articles have drawn the wrath of the i's who have put signs with large, red i's in their windows in the dorm and recently answered him with a strong article against the HELP program.

Other members on the committee besides Eason include Jim Glather, president of MacLean House; Ray Kjar, president of Avery House; Bob Stine, RAM Student Council representative; and Robb Steinhedler, vice president and treasurer of RAM.

Police Seek Suspect In Raping

University and Lincoln police are searching for a man who reportedly raped an 18-year-old University employee Monday.

Capt. Eugene Masters of the campus force said the girl told him she was attacked in a restroom in Andrews Hall during the noon hour.

She described her assailant as being about 40, weighing about 175 pounds and partially bald with dark hair. He was wearing a suede jacket, gray trousers and a white shirt without a tie, she told police.

The girl added that he appeared to be a business or professional man.

A physician examined the girl and was quoted as saying he found indications the girl had been raped.

Applications May Be Filed For Tribunal

Student Council is now accepting applications from senior students to fill the position on Student Tribunal vacated by the death of Don Hall.

Applicants must be in the upper 50% of their class, they can not be a member of Student Council and the Tribunal in the same academic year, and they must be a senior student.

To be nominated by the Nominating Committee of the Council, each applicant must sign up for an interview on the sheet outside the Council's office by Friday at 4 p.m. The interviews will be handled by the Nominating Committee under the direction of Chuck Wilson.

The Council will then elect the senior judge from the applicants submitted by the Nominating Committee.

The term of the new senior judge will extend to the end of the semester only.

The Student Tribunal "serves as a student court on matters of student interest" and consists of four senior judges, one judge from the College of Law, two junior judges, and two faculty judges.
