

Across the Campuses:

KU Upperclassmen Snow English Test

Almost two-thirds of the students who took the English Proficiency examination at the University of Kansas last fall passed the test, according to the Intercollegiate Press.

Of the 718 juniors and seniors, 465 or 63.5 per cent passed, according to figures released by the English department.

The percentage of failure—36.5 per cent—was 3.3 per cent lower than that of the spring semester of 1959 and was the first semester in four that the total number of students failing the test has not risen.

High School Prep

And at Kent State University, the English department knows what it wants and is working to get at it.

Intercollegiate Press reports that the University is working with high schools through reports, publications and conferences to better prepare students for college work.

A five-man committee plans and administers the freshman English program and in addition evaluates and follows up results of a test which entering freshmen must take in vocabulary, reading and spelling.

Reports are sent to high schools whose graduates attain superior ratings on the tests as well as to high schools whose graduates have been assigned to remedial classes.

The greatest weakness, according to Dr. Edgar L. McCormick, chairman of the freshman English program, is the lack of careful evaluation of pre-college writing.

Several publications are available to the schools, including one which reminds pre-college students that marks in many courses are based on written answers to essay questions and that many types of outside writings are required.

The book notes that students earning a "B" in high school English generally don't have the skills necessary for success in college English.

Basic Pro Nursing

Boston University's School

of Nursing has embarked on a basic professional nursing program four academic years in length rather than 42 months, bringing the nursing program into the scheduled plan of the other schools and colleges within the University.

Dean Marie Farrell said this will make it possible to provide for improved correlation of the fundamental general liberal subjects with professional subjects in "a more telling manner."

She said, "Some content and some of the clinical practice have been telescoped into a more meaningful pattern so that we anticipate an even better product despite the shortened time."

Students tend to agree with the plan since it provides free summers in which to earn money, travel "or engage in some other type of activity contributing to their personal development."

Previously, nursing students, except for the summer following their freshman year, were in the clinical fields for 12 weeks each of the summers following the sophomore and junior years, as well as during the junior and senior academic year.

All clinical instruction will now be placed in the regular academic school years.

Leapyear Toll Shows Disparity

By Pat Dean

Two girls leaped and bounced back with rings on Monday, Leap Day. But the rest of NU's coeds obviously did not fare so well, or else they weren't trying.

As one male declared, "Leave it up to the girls and nothing gets done."

Young GOP Slate Labor Series

The Young Republicans will begin a series of three programs dealing with labor and politics Thursday evening in 240 Student Union at 7:30.

Mr. Max Harding, Lincoln attorney and prominent Nebraska Republican, will address the group on the topic "Labor Issues in 1960 Nebraska Elections."

The second program will deal with the topic: "Labor Issues in the 1960 National Elections." A panel discussion will be featured, according to Pete Struve, program chairman.

Third Program "Plans for the third program are as yet indefinite," reported Struve. "We have contacted speakers, but have not received a confirmation."

Judy Cox, Delta Gamma freshman in Arts and Sciences, has been appointed as Member-at-large to the YR Executive Council.

The appoint was made in a special meeting of the council Thursday," stated Rod Ellerbusch, president.

Reppert Res'igns

The Council also accepted the resignation of Vivian Reppert, membership chairman.

A new chairman has not yet been appointed, according to Ellerbusch.

Other business before the Executive Council included plans for participation in Founders' Day, Mar. 28; an airport reception for Nixon when he arrives in Lincoln; and organizational meetings with outstate students attending the State Convention.

NU Health Service Has Twenty-Eight Specialists

The University Health Service is served by a staff of 28 specialists.

These specialists are Lincoln doctors who maintain private practices in the city. They spend some of their time at the Health Center each week depending on the need for their services, Dr. Fuenning, director of Student Health said.

He explained that few college health services operate with a staff of specialists. Dr. Fuenning remarked that the system of specialists, inaugurated in 1946, had proven very satisfactory.

"Specialists can often more accurately diagnose an illness which may have symptoms common to many diseases," Dr. Fuenning said.

An accurate diagnosis is important in preventing complications, chronic illness, and communication of diseases.

"Often students do not understand that an accurate diagnosis of their illness takes time," Dr. Fuenning said. "In order to treat them effectively, the specialist must confirm his diagnosis through lab tests."

The Health Center specialists are dermatologists, surgeons, radiologists, gynecologists, orthopedist, urologists, pathologists, ear nose and throat doctors and internal medicine doctors.

One or more of these doctors are at the Health Center Monday through Friday from 8-12 a.m. and 1-5 p.m. Saturday hours are 10 a.m.-12 noon. In an emergency situation requiring the services of a particular type of specialist, he is called to the Health Center, Dr. Fuenning said. All the specialists may also be called to the Student Health center in the case of a night emergency Dr. Fuenning said.

Due to the cooperation of these Lincoln specialists, the students are able to obtain much better medical service, the director added.

Lucky Strike's Dr. Frood is asked

Why Are Today's Students More Serious, Dedicated, Industrious?

Dear Dr. Frood: In your day, college students were all rah-rah and raccoon coats. Today's student is more responsible, more dedicated, more industrious. What accounts for this big change? Studious

Dear Stu: Today's world is more complex, more challenging. Ideologies clash. Our planet grows smaller. The cold war strikes fear into our hearts. There is a shortage of raccoons.

Dear Dr. Frood: I am disgusted with my classmates. All they think about is women and parties. How can I get them to talk about important things? Serious

Dear Serious: Throw a large party. Invite plenty of women. Then, around midnight, say something important, like "We're out of beer."

Dear Dr. Frood: Modern girls go to college for four years. Then they get married and don't even know how to change diapers. What is this leading to? Old-Fashioned

Dear Old-Fashioned: Self-sufficient babies.

Dear Dr. Frood: Why doesn't everybody smoke Lucky Strike? Lucky Smoker

Dear Lucky: Why doesn't everybody get straight "A's"? Senior

Dear Dr. Frood: Grandfather's will provided a rather handsome allowance on the stipulation that I showed "the courage and strength of character" to stay in college. Frankly, however, I am tired of college. I have been here 40 years. Is there any way I can quit and still collect? Senior

Dear Senior: Your question brings up a considerable number of legal problems, with interesting technical ramifications. Having given the matter much thought, I have this suggestion: enter Law School.

Dear Dr. Frood: Here are two portraits of Beethoven. One was done by an old master. The other by a student. Which is the masterpiece? Art Lover

Dear Art: The one on the left is the master's work. The stroke is deft, clean, authoritative. Every detail is authentic Beethoven, even the gesture of keeping his composing hand warm.

Dear Dr. Frood: Has college ever really helped anyone in business? Practical

Dear Practical: Of course. Think how college has helped the people who make pennants, footballs, fraternity pins.
