

Dr. Reinhardt Will Answer Last Question

Dr. James R. Reinhardt, nationally famous author, lecturer and professor of criminology at the University, will present "The Last Question" tomorrow at 4:30 p.m. in the Little Auditorium.

"The Last Question," which is the final discussion in the Student Union Last Lecture Series, deals with how the personality influences behavior. "Why did he do it? What is the answer? Why will a seemingly normal person suddenly emerge with a totally unpredictable act?"

Dr. Reinhardt is well-known as a lecturer. The demand to hear one of his speeches was once so great that he had to move from the Union to the Auditorium to enable everyone to listen.

Dr. Reinhardt was born in Dalton, Georgia, in 1894. He received his BA degree in 1923 from Berea College in Kentucky and served as managing editor of the "Berea Citizen."

The professor studied at the University of Chicago and then received his master's degree from the University of North Dakota in 1925. After further study at Morris College in Barboursville, West Virginia, Dr. Reinhardt received his Ph.D. from the University of North Dakota in 1929.

Professor Reinhardt did post-graduate study at the University of Oregon and at the City College in Detroit.

In 1931 he came to the University of Nebraska as an assistant professor of sociology. He has since been here for 30 years. Dr. Reinhardt was promoted to full professorship in 1937 and served as Chairman of the Department of Sociology from 1951 to 1954.

Since 1951, Dr. Reinhardt has been Professor of Criminology here at the University. He has written more than 70 articles in the fields of social psychology and criminology.

Among his recent books are "Social Problems and Social Policy," 1951; "Social Problems; a Book for Nurses," 1952; "Social Psychology," and "Sex Perversions and Six Crimes," 1958.

A new book, "The Murderer's Trail of Charles Starkweather," is expected to be published this fall.

Panhel OKs Rush System

Suggestions Will Be Considered Later

Panhellenic Council has approved a new rush system which will be used this fall.

Miss Madeline Girard, director of Panhellenic, said the rush schedule was accepted as it was originally presented to the houses.

Consideration still will be given to constructive suggestions made by the individual sororities when the final schedule is drafted, she said. The new system would actually be to the benefit of the sororities and rushees, she contended. The new plan will eliminate extra large parties and give the rushee and the sororities a chance to meet more girls, she said.

In addition the release system would be eliminated due to an automatic elimination action by the invitations sent for the second group of parties.

The first group of parties will include six one hour parties. The second group consists for four two-hour parties. A separate set of invitations must be sent for each group of parties.

Miss Girard said the main criticism of the program was the time element involved with such little time between rush parties. However, she explained, since the parties will be smaller and shorter, no difficulties should arise.

Cancer Research Grant Given to NU Med School

The University College of Medicine in Omaha has been given a $2,500,000 grant for the construction of the Eugene C. Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer and Allied Diseases.

The establishment of the Eppley Institute by the directors of the Eugene C. Eppley Foundation, Inc., involves the construction of a six-story structure which with equipment, will cost $1,800,000. Construction is scheduled to begin in the fall.

Building, Equipment In addition to $650,000 being supplied by the Foundation, the building and equipment will be financed by an $800,000 grant from the Public Health Service and $350,000 from the University's College of Medicine Building Levy.

The balance of the Eppley Foundation gift of $1,850,000 plus an estimated $500,000 in interest earnings will be used over a 20 year period to inaugurate and firmly establish the Institute's research program.

Chancellor Clifford M. Hardin called the Eppley Foundation gift "one of the most important educational and medical seeds ever planted in Nebraska."

He went on to say that as a result of the Foundation grant, substantial amounts of additional funds are anti-ipated throughout the next 20 years from the National Institute of Health, the American Cancer Society, the University and other sources.

According to the directors of the Eppley Foundation, the work of the institute will have a three-fold objective: to gain a better understanding of the causes of cancer and allied diseases; to assist in the improvement of methods for diagnosis; and to assist in the improvement of methods for treatment and prevention of cancer and similar disorders.

The proposed plans also call for cancer seminars and teaching clinics at intervals with visiting lecturers of national prominence for the purpose of making available to all physicians in the Omaha area, as well as medical students, the advances in research and treatment of cancer.

"With these prospects, it seems inevitable that the Eugene C. Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer and Allied Diseases, within a few years, shall attain recognition not only in the entire Midwest area but also nationally," commented Dr. Hardin.

The Eppley Institute is expected to have eventually a staff of between 100 and 200 specialized personnel, with annual expenditures of more than a million dollars.

Major Responsibility

Dean J. P. Tollman of the College of Medicine said that the major responsibility of the new research staff will be to develop cancer-related research projects and to use the resources of the University, College of Medicine, University Hospital, and other resources available in a cooperative attack on cancer and allied diseases.

"Since the cancer problem is extremely complex and involves knowledge and techniques peculiar to many fields such as various specialties of chemistry, physiology, radiology, as well as those of medicine itself, we believe our initial effort must be one of encouraging and coordinating projects in several areas," he said.

Dean Tollman explained that since the members of the Institute's staff will serve on the faculty of the College of Medicine, they will be able to strengthen the cancer-related phases of the state's medical educational program.

Announcement of the establishment of the Cancer Research Institute followed almost two years of intensive planning and study of cancer research facilities throughout the United States by representatives of the Eppley Foundation and the University, including a visit to the campus by a team of four national authorities in the field of cancer to confer with Eppley officials and the University.

Direct Result

Creation of the Institute is the direct result of the recommendations of Eugene C. Eppley in 1956 that the Foundation make a substantial grant to the study of the control and cure of cancer if after investigation, such procedure seemed practical.

The Institute's facilities, which will be located on the College of Medicine campus and will be connected to the University Hospital by tunnels, will house a series of well-equipped, specialized laboratories and conference and seminar rooms. The equipment will include all instruments and other facilities necessary for advanced cancer-related research in the basic science.

Dr. Hardin said the construction of the Institute building and the recruitment of a first-rate hard-core research staff to direct its program will enable the University to seek and get research project support from many sources throughout the nation.

"With this generous gift," the Chancellor said, "the Eugene C. Eppley Foundation is not only providing a physical facility which the University could not hope to receive through the usual financial channels but also is insuring an outstanding anti-cancer program for Nebraska."

PROPOSED CENTER - This $1.8 million six-story structure, with equipment, will be known as the Eugene C. Eppley Institute for Research in Cancer and Allied Diseases. It will be constructed on the University College of Medicine campus in Omaha and will be financed and operated by a $2.5 million grant from the Eppley Foundation, a $800,000 grant from U.S. Public Health Service and $350,000 from the University's medical levy.

It's A Dog's Life

The Campus police are currently making a thorough investigation into a hit and run accident involving a well known personality on campus.

Herman, a care-free mascot about campus, was struck by a speeding automobile in front of his Delta Upsilon home last Thursday morning.

Quite obviously shaken up by the accident, Herman was unable to comment, but later at Student Health when asked by the campus police how it happened he barked, "I looked up and all I saw was a bumper!"

Attending physicians stated he was not seriously hurt and should be fully recovered in a few days.

Currently he is under the watching care of Mrs. Harry Scott, DU house mother. Visitors welcome.

-Civil Defense-

Campus Drill Termed Success

In less than three minutes after Civil Defense sirens began to wail on Tuesday there was nary a student leisurely walking on campus, reports Roy Loudon, Civil Defense coordinator.

Students hustled to the lower floors of University buildings as part of the command of Civil Defense authorities. The upper floors of many buildings were vacated in less than two minutes, Loudon said.

The Administration Building and Teachers College reported that they were cleared in less than two minutes and that students cooperated well.

The Civil Defense Alert was held in connection with a nation-wide alert held yesterday. Authorities from Kansas City announced the time the campus would sound off the sirens.

According to Loudon the alert is to be an annual event to bring Civil Defense to mind and point out what can be done when an alert is needed.

This is the second alert on campus. The first was held last year but was different in that students were urged to vacate the buildings instead of going to the lower floors.

Loudon also said that the alert helped the administration decide whether the new sirens, one on city and the other on Ag, worked. Last year parts of the campus could not hear the old sirens.

After 10 minutes all returned to normal duties. Loudon termed the alert as a success on campus.
