Cadets Honored Thursday Air Force Sgt. Given Award

Four ROTC cadets and an Air Force sergeant were honored Thursday before approximately 1,700 Army and Air Force cadets. The cadets were massed together in a joint parade on the University parade grounds for the event.

Colonel W. B. Atwell, professor of Air Science at the University presented Master Sergeant Henry C. Pritz the Air Force Commendation Medal for distinguished and meritorious service.

Two Air Force Cadets were presented awards. Cadet First Lt. Frank J. May was awarded the Commendation Ribbon for his service as a statistical clerk. These presentations were also made by Col. Atwell.

Cadet Colonel Donald D. Nelson was awarded the Air Reserve Squadron Award for the leadership qualities and achievements he had demonstrated as Wing Commander for the Air Force ROTC during 1959-1960.

Loren C. Cottrell of the Forty and Eight Society presented Cadet Master Sergeant Dee E. Cuttell with the Forty and Eight Award for high academic performance at the University.

The other award of the day was presented to Cadet Michael F. Flannigan for high scholastic proficiency and high interest in Army ROTC by Mrs. Arthur Luhrs, president of Nebraska American Legion Auxilliary.

Amendments Require Vote By a Third

At least one-third of the student body must vote at Student Council elections today if the proposed amendments are to go into effect.

Ballots will include names of candidates for the representation from the nine colleges. Separate ballots will be available for the vote for or against the amendments.

Copies of the proposed amendments will be presented to the voters.

According to Kathy Roach, chairman of the council's election committee, all students, including graduate students and non-residents are eligible to vote on the amendments.

Sophomores Report to Student Health— Exams Taken by Teachers

More than 300 Teachers College students report to Student Health each year for their health examinations, required for all sophomores in Teachers.

Dr. Samuel Fuenning, director of Student Health, said the examination is one of the requirements for teacher certifications.

In the last five years, the time of the physical he has been changed from the senior year to the sophomore year, he said.

The reason for this is to benefit the student who needs corrective work or to discover early if a person is not physically fit for the teaching profession.

Dr. Fuenning explained that the process was set up quite systematically and, if followed correctly, took little of the student's time.

The students are first notified by Teachers College and several questionnaires are distributed to them concerning past illness and allergies. The student fills out the questionnaire before he reports to Student Health for his physical.

The physical is filed at the Health Center and the student is consulted if any corrective treatment is needed.

When a student reaches the senior level, a state health certificate is sent to Student Health and is filled out according to the student's health record. This statement must be signed by a physician and then returned with other records to the teachers certification board.

One only difficulty with the system, Dr. Fuenning, said, is that often students wait until the very end of the sophomore year for their physicals. This causes unnecessary inconvenience to the students and student health staff.
