

Navy Day Has Significance For Eighteen University Men

Navy Day, which is Thursday, has special meaning for 18 particular Nebraska students.

The students in question are 18 NESEP (Navy Enlisted Scientific Education Program) men currently enrolled in some phase of engineering, mathematics or science. They are just part of a total program used across the nation in 23 colleges and universities.

Regular Service

As in most NESEP cases, the Nebraska Navy students qualified for advance study after they had been in the regular Navy for varying periods of time.

None of the applicants could be over 25 years old before entering a college or university. They did not need prior college training, only a high school diploma or satisfactory achievement on a special test. The program is open to both males and females, married or single.

Before enrolling at Nebraska, the NESEP qualifiers attended a preparatory school for nine weeks at either Bainbridge or San Diego, Calif.

During this period the selectees received training in math, physics, English usage, and orientation in college academic requirements. Also during this time the future students selected their field of study with the help of interviews.

Normal Life

Most of the 18 Nebraska NESEP's are married and lead a normal college student's life.

While in school the students still belong to the U.S. Navy. They continue to meet with Navy officials and advance in rate. After receiving his degree, the student reports to the Officer Candidate School in Newport, R.I. for officer indoctrination. After finishing this, the NESEP student becomes an ensign in the regular Navy.

Despite the difficult nature of the fields of study the Navy students have, the honors are many. In 1959 one student was cited at the Honors Convocation as being in the upper 10 percent of his college, four were honored during Honors Convocation last May, one was a member of Sigma Tau (engineering professional fraternity), another was a member of the Blueprint editorial staff.

As a whole, the NESEP grade average for the second semester, 1959-1960, was 6.641 as compared with the all-university men's average of 5.380.

Six Years

Upon graduation and commission the Navy students are then required to obligate themselves for at least 4 years of active Navy duty.

Four seniors are enrolled at Nebraska under this plan, James Brink in electrical engineering, David Farlow, chemical engineering; William Kisch, mathematics and William Fish, physics.

There are three in the junior class; Jack Mundell, mathematics; John Hendricks, electrical engineering and Lennart Swenson, electrical engineering.

Paul Thorn, electrical engineering, George Graft, physics; Thomas J. Sindorf, mechanical engineering and Robert Miley, electrical engineering make up the sophomore class.

The largest class, the freshmen, numbers seven; Larry Cecil, chemistry; John Vorwerk, electrical engineering; Richard Gokey, electrical engineering; Wayne Bostic, electrical engineering, James Lewis, physics; Myron Kyle, electrical engineering and Ido Pistelli, chemical engineering.
