THE MAGNIFICENT SEVEN. A United Artists picture starring Yul Brynner, Steve McQueen, Eli Wallach, Horst Bucholz, Robert Vaughn and Charles Bronson. A western adaptation of gunfighters are hired at the Japanese film "Seven Samurai." "The Magnificent Seven" is a colorful and exciting western. Seven small Mexican village from gunfighters are hired at $15 each to rid a small Mexican village from the plunderings of a bandit and his outlaws. Yul Brynner a cowboy? Yes, and he does a fine job that sharply contrasts with his past tyrannical, stereotyped parts. Outstanding thespic honors go to Eli Wallach as Calvera, the bandit. Wallach is generally considered a stage actor, but his screen appearances are always anticipated. A method actor, Wallach studied with Lee Strasberg as Actors Studio. Vladimir Sokoloff genuinely enacts the Old Man of the Mexican village who will not leave his home when the bandits attack. As Wallach studied the 'Method' from Lee Strasberg, Sokoloff was a student of Constantin Stanislavski, Russian who originated the 'Method.' The photography is brilliant and the music score is lively, reminiscent of Jerome Moross' powerful score for "The Big Country." Film is tightly directed by John Sturges, who also directed "The Old Man and the Sea" and "Gunfight at the OK Corral."

Council May Start Libraries

Reference Material Available to Dorms?

Small reference libraries may be installed in the girl's dormitory and Selleck Quadrangle in the future if a suitable plan can be worked out by the Student Council library committee. Dave Bliss, chairman of the committee, suggested that the libraries include encyclopedias and dictionaries or other references to be selected by the experienced library personnel. Bliss said that the money for such a project might "possibly come in the form of donations from alumni and others."

Student Council Considers Faculty Evaluation Study

An evaluation of Nebraska faculty, orientated by the Student Council, is presently being looked into.

He added that he was not sure of all the details of such an evaluation. Some of the questions include: "What can be done? What is the best way to conduct this? How can it be done so as not to hurt someone?"

The Council voted Wednesday to accept a motion by Steve Gage that was tabled last week calling for "an investigation that would point out undesirable faculty members."

George Moyer pointed out that a similar attempt was made "about 3 years ago and the Student Council vetoed it." He asked that Gage check the Council files on this earlier report.

Gage defended his proposal by saying it was "not intended to weed out faculty members. It is only because there has been enough student body agitation concerning individual faculty members that we should see if something can be done," he said. Gage promised the Council to have some sort of report at next week's meeting.
