

Planetarium Sky Shows Commence Fourth Year

On March 23 Mueller Planetarium, a division of the University State Museum, will complete its third year of operation.

During these three years more than 80,000 people of all age groups have visited "The Theater of the Stars."

Sky shows in the planetarium are changed approximately once every month and a half. The programs feature lectures by personnel of the state museum and give the viewers an inside look at the heavens. Currently showing is "Astrology—Fact or Fiction?"

For untold centuries man believed in the influence of the stars upon human destinies. This belief, astrology, persisted as the most intellectual movement of all epochs. It infected every culture, no matter what the prevailing religion, and it infiltrated every level of education.

It was based upon the sun's position to that of the stars and the star patterns at the time of birth. This set of circumstances was thought to have a determining factor on a person's character and fate.

The sky show traced the origin and development of this belief. Stars of a special significance will be pointed out.

The path of the sun plus those of the planets is known as the Zodiac and the contained constellations are "signs of the Zodiac."

Public sky shows are given at 8 p.m. Wednesday, 2:45 Saturday, and 2:30 and 3:45 p.m. on Sundays. Children under the age of five are not admitted. Group Sky shows are given on week days by reservation.

Sky for March

Thursday, 9—The moon is in last quarter.

Sunday, 12—First Saturn and the moon and then Jupiter and the moon occupy the same portion of the sky.

Tuesday, 14—The moon is at perigee at a distance of 225,300 miles from the earth. Mercury and the moon occupy the same portion of the sky.

Thursday, 16—The moon is new.

Saturday, 18—Venus and the moon occupy the same portion of the sky.

Monday, 20—Mercury is as far above the eastern horizon as it will be this month. At 2:32 p.m. (C.S.T.) the sun will be exactly on the equator and spring begins.

Thursday, 23—The moon is in first quarter.

Friday, 24—Mars and the moon occupy the same portion of the sky.

Sunday, 26—The moon is at apogee at a distance of 251,600 miles from the earth.

The Planets

Mercury is visible for a few mornings close to the 20th. It will be low in the east just before sunrise, but is not easily seen.

Venus is a brilliant evening star seen low in the west for about 3 hours after sunset, but it is drawing closer to the sun. It is at its greatest brilliance to-night.

Mars is in Gemini and is beginning to dim. It is nearly to the meridian at sunset and sets about two hours after midnight.

Jupiter is moving into Capricornus, and may be seen low in the southeast just before sunrise.

Saturn is just a few degrees west of Jupiter.

A Liberal View

should these people be deprived of equal benefits that will accrue to those who chose to remain in their own country and begin seeking a future.

Some persons argue that corps members should receive a salary equivalent to the average college graduate's starting wage in this country. The proponents of this plan feel that this money could be placed in a bank in this country and be here when the corps member finishes his tour of duty. It is maintained that this will provide an added incentive to those exceptionally qualified individuals, who otherwise would have no monetary reward waiting for them and might give a second thought to whether the experience abroad would really be worth it.

Opponents of this argument feel that the natives of the country where the corps member was serving would soon learn that although the volunteers were living and eating just like the natives, they had the incentive of money waiting for them at home pushing them on to their duty, and this might create hard feelings on the part of the natives.

Not so, argue the proponents. The natives would more than likely have an added respect for those Americans who would give up the chance to live on a $5,000 or $6,000 salary a year at home to come overseas and live as a native with no benefits whatsoever, until they returned home two or three years later.

Most important is that a peace corps is needed, certainly as well organized and as lucrative as possible, but not to the point of being bureaucratic, or it will be not better than the critics of the foreign service consider that branch of the government.

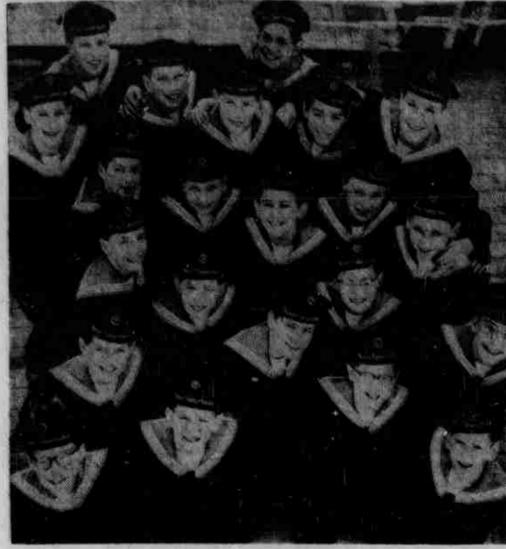

A Lincoln minister who spent some time in Mexico not long ago, remarked recently about the deadness of activity around the United States embassy as compared to the number of Russian students that were rushing around their embassy and milling in the streets, talking to their Mexican counterparts and promoting the unrest in Mexico. With the standard of living of our neighbors to the south as low as it is, we cannot expect to sit idly by and assume that the Soviets have no chance of gaining a foothold in Mexico. It has been amply demonstrated by the status of Cuba that all is not well in the Western Hemisphere.

It should be evident that time can not be wasted in organizing the peace corps into an effective and meaningful weapon for liberty and freedom.

Ag Engineer Receives Merit Award High School Publication Professor Grants Set

A federal agricultural engineer stationed at the University was awarded a Certificate of Merit from the U.S. Department of Agriculture this week.

Norris P. Swanson of Lincoln, received the award, signed by Dr. Byron Shaw, administrator of the USDA's Agricultural Research Service (ARS) in recognition of research on erosion of irrigated land carried out from Nov. 1, 1959 to Oct. 30, 1960.

In addition to the certificate, Swanson received a cash award of $300.

Swanson, who works cooperatively with the University department of agricultural engineering, is under the jurisdiction of the Western Soil and Water Management Research branch of the ARS.

He was one of 16 scientists from 10 states in the ARS northern region to receive the Certificate of Merit.

A native of Clarinda, Ia., and a graduate of Iowa State University, Swanson has been working in Nebraska since 1955.

His general studies of erosion of irrigated cropland have involved measurement of runoff from simulated rainfall and design of water ways to carry runoff water from irrigation.

Twelve scholarships from the Newspaper Fund totaling $800 have been made available through the University School of Journalism to qualified Nebraska high school publications advisers for a summer workshop, June 26 to 30.

The Newspaper Fund Grants, announced by Don Carter, executive director of the Fund in New York, and Prof. James Morrison, workshop director at the School of Journalism, are organized and supported by the Wall Street Journal.

Morrison said the Fund grant will defray the costs of a week's intensive training for

Newman Club Holds Officer Installation

University's Catholic Newman Club recently held its installation of officers accompanied by a banquet, Mass and sermon.

William E. Johnson was installed as the new president. Other officers are Mike Hewlett, vice president; Connie Vavra, recording secretary; Betty Ann Gruntorad, corresponding secretary; Donna Shuste alumni secretary and Maurice Wiese, treasurer.

"This training will help upgrade classroom instruction and improve publications. We also hope it will stimulate the teacher to encourage more interest among students in journalism as a career," Morrison said.

The workshop will emphasize the "hows" and "whys" of journalism. The history of the press, the significance of the press in modern society, case studies of some of the great American newspapers, and the general overall need for top quality people in journalism will be stressed, said Morrison.

The workshop will also include such "how-to-do-it" topics as layout and makeup, new production techniques, use of pictures, balanced editorial content, sports, staff organization, advertising, and circulation.

Workshop personnel will be given considerable training in reporting, editing and writing. Top-flight speakers from the working press will address the workshop and will discuss mutual problems.

Application blanks for the Publications Advisers' Workshop may be obtained by writing to Prof. James Morrison, School of Journalism, University of Nebraska. The deadline for applications is March 30.

Teacher Grads Fail To Teach

Less than three-fourths of the Teachers College graduates in the United States entered teaching careers last year, according to the Associated Press.

These figures were printed in a new booklet published by the National Education Association (NEA). This booklet blamed the small number on low teachers salaries.

The NEA has established a goal to raise teacher salary averages to $10,750 by 1964-65 compared to the current figure of $5,389.

Even at this new high, teachers salaries would only be about 75 per cent of the average for other professional earnings, the NEA stated.

The association said the teachers added last year met only about half the demand for new teachers this school year. The other half, NEA said, was met by former teachers returning to the profession or persons not trained for teaching.

Display Features African Drawings

Drawings made while on a trip through Uganda, Ruanda-Urundi, the Congo and Nigeria by Al Blaustein are now on display in the Union Ballroom gallery.

These pieces depicting life in Africa are "brilliantly executed examples of the art of drawing, ranging through a wide variety of effects and suggestive of many differing moods."

In addition they are perceptive and sympathetic records of human personality, which in the context of today's news, have particular pertinence, according to Norman Geske, director of the University Art Galleries.

In the last six years Blaustein has received a Prix de Rome Fellowship, a Guggenheim Fellowship, an American Academy of Arts and Letters Grant, and the Eyre Medal for Graphic Arts at the Pennsylvania Academy.

His work was most recently shown in the Nordness Gallery of New York and was included in the Nebraska Art Association's exhibit of 1960.
