Who IS Responsible For Subrosa Activity?

In the past forty-eight hours, three groups, vitally concerned with the activities of subrosa organizations have gone on the record to condemn the actions of subrosa groups, namely Theta Nu Epsilon, Pi Xi and Red Dot.

It would seem only natural that the University Administration follow in the foot-steps of the student body and take some sort of action. Indications are this action will occur in the near future.

If the student body and the Administration fail to take the proper action at this time, all could be lost. Within two or three years the subrosa groups could again have control of all campus activities.

Whether you are a student, a faculty member or a member of the Administration, it is your responsibility to join in the fight against subrosas — for the good of the University and your colleagues.

We, the student, the faculty members or the Administration, are at fault for not stopping this earlier. Now it is our responsibility to stop it, whether we like it or not.

KK Spring Show Set for Saturday

All members of the University community are urged to take a break Saturday evening and attend the Kosmet Klub's production of "Damn Yankees."

Much has been said about the hard working members of the Klub and the harder working members of the cast. They have been practicing now, for many weeks. Let's show them their efforts aren't in vain.

Last year's production was outstanding and indications are this year's will be even better. The Daily Nebraskan will leave the technical comment to Phil Boroff.

If nothing else, this year's Kosmet Klub workers have spent more time and energy announcing this production, than any other group on campus. Their attempts have been aided by the use of the public address system atop Selleck Quadrangle. Further publicity has been gained by using portable loud-speakers in foreign cars.

Word has it there will be a "traveling" combo playing throughout the campus Saturday afternoon. The combo hopes to play for a street dance and guarantees to "swing out."

We hope you all swing out Saturday afternoon and get out Saturday evening to the Kosmet Klub's "Damn Yankees" production.

Peace Corps Poll Shows Interest

According to the straw vote (results on front page) it would appear that Nebraska students are definitely interested in the Peace Corps. Of course, the poll is biased in that people who were not interested in the Corps probably would not answer the poll. We feel however that this is offset by the fact that it was taken in the Crib rather than through the classrooms or in the library, where presumably more serious students abound.

Certainly the response is strong enough to cast some reflection on the attitudes of the students of the University compared with those in surrounding schools.

Also we feel that the Administration, Student Council, Young Democrats, Young Republicans, foreign student groups, Faculty Senate, Board of Regents, and other groups presumably interested in this area and the development of the University should very much begin to investigate and work with groups to establish a center at the University.

We want to thank the students for their cooperation in aiding us with the poll, especially the Crib workers. The poll results will be sent to the Peace Corps headquarters.

The staff of this paper will make every effort to obtain all of the available information on the Corps, the movement to aid it at this University, and its progress in the nation. — RA

Inside View

By Phil Boroff

This time every year, a gilt-complected, rather small man like statuette called "Oscar" becomes the focus of attention of an entire industry and of millions of fans. He consistently demands the largest audience assembled for any single television program. His owners obtain large increases in both salary and prestige. He is sometimes considered a jinx, but thousands of dollars are spent in advertisement to win him. The 33-year-old "Oscar" is understandably the most popular and coveted of many film awards. On Monday evening, the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences and the entire film industry will be caught by television cameras. Unlike 1958's "Gigi" and 1959's "Ben-Hur," there is no highly favored or popular film expected to dominate the awards. Any nominee could unsurprisingly win. However, here are some final predictions: The "Best Picture" will be "The Apartment," and its director, Billy Wilder, will win the "Best Direction" award. Burt Lancaster in "Elmer Gantry" is in the lead for the "Best Actor" award, while the "Best Supporting Actor" will be Sal Mineo in "Exodus." Contradicting an earlier prediction, the "Best Actress" award will go to Elizabeth Taylor for "Butterfield 8." This will be a close race with strong competition from the often-nominated Deborah Kerr in "The Sundowners." "Best Supporting Actress" will be Shirley Jones in "Elmer Gantry." The technical awards are fairly unpredictable. Obvious winners are "Best Achievement in Cinematography of a Black-and-White Picture for Freddie Francis and "Sons and Lovers," "Best Music Score of a Dramatic or Comedy Picture" for Ernest Gold and "Exodus," and "Best Story and Screenplay Written Directly for the Screen" for Wilder and I. A. L. Diamond "The Apartment." In all other categories, it's wide open. Oscar himself has been a film actor. In this weekend's Union Film Committee presentation of "The statuette appears as a prop at various times. This film, which stars Lana Turner and Kirk Douglas, also won five 'Oscars' in 1953. The co-feature in the film adaptation is Clifford Odets' play "The Big Knife," with Jack Palance in the role originated by the late John Garfield. Both films are exciting accounts of the film world, proving that Hollywood can use itself as a subject most effectively. As I view these films this evening, it will be the seventh time I have seen "The Bad and the Beautiful" (one of my favorites) and the third time for "The Big Knife." Saturday evening I will attend Kosmet Klub's presentation of the award winning musical "Damn Yankees." Based on the novel "The Year the Yankees

Legality Challenged In Council Action

To the Editor, An Open Letter to Mr. John Hoerner, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the Student Council:

We must protest the irregular action of your committee in regard to three organizations sponsored by the Department of Romance Languages: Phi Sigma Iota, French Club and Spanish Club. These are law-abiding organizations of long-standing, functioning under the supervision of members of our department staff. To the best of my knowledge, they have complied with every official request which has reached them through normal channels. We do not recognize threats published in the columns of The Daily Nebraskan as constituting official requests. Under our system of government a man is not condemned except by due process of law. Certainly in a university community the rights of the individual and of organizations should be just as jealously guarded.

We therefore challenge the legality of the action of the Council in rescinding the constitutions of these three organizations. If the Council has any charges to make against these groups, let them be made officially in writing to the faculty advisers who are responsible for the conduct of the organization. When this has been done, the Council will find that it has no need to make irresponsible threats in the student paper in order to obtain compliance with official regulations. Sincerely yours, Charles W. Colman Chairman

Peace Corps Plan Needs Student Help

To the Editor: The recent cry around has been for culture—and the damn yankees perahing tomorrow

Peace Corps provides one of the greatest possible opportunities for answering the cry! This is an opportunity to see the grassroots of other cultures, and it would behoove the students of this University to support the program to the utmost. It is high time that we raised our lethargic selves from the depths of the Nebraska grasslands—support this thing: think about it, talk about it, do something about it! This is an idea which really affects each of us. Sure it benefits the nation—and it can benefit us, too. People involved with the proposed school can't help but be the kind who are exciting to know and who get things done. And who knows—just maybe it will benefit somebody else, too—like the other countries involved. Anyone who listened to the Young Democrats panel on the Corps (and there weren't many) knows that other countries are interested in the idea, that they are aware of the problems involved, but they appear to be willing to take it on. Let's go, Nebraskans! Vicky Cullen
