Ag Science Conference Draws 400 Prepsters

"A revolution is in progress..."

The revolution is in agriculture and the map of the battleground is lettered with the word science."

These are the words of Dr. Donald Hanway, chairman of the department of agronomy, as he spoke before approximately 400 high school students yesterday during the College of Agriculture's 4th Annual Science in Agriculture Conference.

Honorary Selects

Holl, Hastings

Dr. John W. Holl, associate professor of mechanical engineering and Col. Vern Hastings of the U.S. Air Force have been initiated as honorary members of Pi Tau Sigma.

The two were initiated in recognition of their outstanding service in the field of engineering by the mechanical engineering fraternity.

Eight new students were also initiated into Pi Tau Sigma at the same meeting. They are:

Ronald Kuss, Raymond Lesig, Neil Ferguson, Ken Frost, Roger Evens, Richard Valdez, Larry Dodson and Jerry Dietrich.

NU 4-H'er Wins Pfizer Co. Grant

Phyllis S. Skinner, junior in home economics at the University, has received a Pfizer 4-H scholarship award.

The $250 award was presented at the annual National Extension Training Conference, in session at Purdue University, by Herbert L. Schaller, manager of public relations for the Agricultural Division, Charles Pfizer & Co., Inc.

Active in 4-H work for seven years, Mrs. Skinner held the offices of president, secretary, song leader and news reporter in local club activities. She also served on the County 4-H Fair Board.

Dr. Hanway noted that the objective of the revolution is to provide more stable and adequate supply of food and clothing for the world's population.

According to Dr. Hanway, "It has been estimated that there are at least 15,000 positions open each year for college graduates in agriculture and that colleges of agriculture across the nation are graduating only about 7,000 young men annually.

In the area of home economics, Dr. Hanway said, there is every reason to develop our understanding of nutritional needs and of the nature of the food supply so that the population will still be better nourished in the future.

"The complex, scientific, technological society in which we live means that a college education is necessary to handle the bigger job," Dr. Hanway concluded.
