Outstanding Nebraskan Nominations Include Three New Names

The first two faculty nominations for the Outstanding Nebraskan Award and one other student nomination have been received by the Daily Nebraskan.

The faculty members nominated are Dr. Bertrand Schultz, professor of geology and director of the Morrill Hall state museum, and Charles Patterson, professor of philosophy. Fred Howlett received the nomination for the "outstanding" student award.

Dr. Schultz's recommendation contained the signatures of 63 of the members of Theta Xi fraternity. The letter of nomination cited Schultz as "one of the few men who have furthered the development of the University with little regard for self-recognition and gain."

The letter pointed out that first and foremost Dr. Schultz was a teacher, a professor of geology specializing in the study of vertebrate paleontology, the study of prehistoric fossil animals. He also serves as an adviser to several graduate students engaged in masters and doctoral research.

Paleontology
The letter noted that Dr. Schultz had for 25 years occupied himself with research in the field of vertebrate paleontology, specializing in a family of prehistoric animal similar to the modern day mountain sheep. Dr. Schultz and Charles Falkenbach, of the American Museum of Natural History located in New York City, are the first to concentrate on an entire family of fossils. Their research on the project is nearing completion.

Devotion
"Above all," the letter said, "is the feeling he has for his colleagues and students. His devotion to his state and his University and to his colleagues and students serve to explain the position of respect which he occupies."

Kitty Troxell Selected Miss NU
The letter of nomination for Dr. Patterson noted that he had served as a University instructor for 40 years. He received his M.A. and Ph.D. at the University. He has held the positions of assistant instructor, instructor, assistant professor, associate professor, chairman of the philosophy department since 1953.

His excellence in his field and his ability as a speaker have made him a favorite at the University and in the surrounding Lincoln area, the letter said. Dr. Patterson was a visiting professor at Boston University in 1935, Iliff School of Theology in 1952, the University of Southern California in 1957.

Dr. Patterson has written several books including, Problems in Logic, Principles of Correct Thinking, Moral Standards, and The Philosophy of the Old Testament.

Dr. Patterson belongs to a number of civic organizations including American Philosophical Society, National Council of YMCA, Board of Directors of the local YMCA and the Nebraska chapter of the American Association of University Professors of which he was president from 1957-58.

Great Reputation
The letter concludes, "A teacher's greatest attribute can be found in his reputation among his students. His kindly consideration, counseling and individual assistance is willingly given to any student who might come to his office."

The letter of nomination for University student Fred Howlett listed his qualifications as past president and pledge trainer of his fraternity, Theta Xi active of the Year in 1959-60, Prince Kosmet finalist, past IFC representative and the Nebraska Blueprint. In addition, the letter cited his deputy commandership of the Pershing Rifles, past national battalion commander, past president and vice president of Sigma Tau, engineering honorary; member of Eta Kappa Nu, math honorary and holder of the Delta Tau Delta scholarship for two years.

In conclusion, the letter said, "Howlett has maintained superior scholarship while enrolled in the College of Engineering."

Others previously nominated for the student "Outstanding Nebraskan" award include Ken Tempero, Skip Harris and Tom Eason.

Nominations for the student and faculty awards will be accepted by the Daily Nebraskan until 5 p.m. Friday. The "Outstanding Nebraskans" will be featured in the last issue of the Rag on May 26.

University Approves 'Prep' Summer School Program

By Ann Meyer

The University has approved a plan for an experimental "prep" summer school for boys who will graduate from high school in June.

The program devised by a University junior, Bob Smith, received the final approval of Administration two weeks ago. Smith felt that such a program might help alleviate some of the problems students encounter adjusting to the first year of college.

He said he felt that "getting off to a bad start was often the cause of low grades and the failure of some capable students. Many first year students have difficulty coordinating study time, social life and group living; the advance program may help them to adjust more easily."

High school senior men interested in the program must apply to the University for enrollment in the summer session. They will register for a schedule of courses recommended by the University and will attend regular classes along with other summer school students.

The male students will receive credit and grades in the courses just as any other student and the final grades will be recorded on his University record if he continues as a student here.

Summerside House

Summerside House, named after one of Smith's fraternity brothers, is in reality the Delta Upsilon house. A total of 52 boys can be accommodated in the house according to Smith. The staff of the house will include Smith, who will act as general administrator and two counselors Mats Holm and Tom Chandler. The counselors will aid the boys with their scholarship program and serve as tutors for those who need scholastic aid.

The boys will arrive at Summerside June 9 for an orientation session. During this period they will be introduced to the campus and the facilities it offers. A general idea of what is to be expected of the boys will also be included in the orientation session.

During the eight week session, the students will be expected to care for his own room and assist with the maintenance of the living rooms. This will help the boys adjust to group living and cooperation Smith indicated.

With the beginning of classes on June 13 a definite schedule will go into effect which will serve as a guide for the students. The mornings will be devoted to classes with one hour prior to lunch devoted to chores around the house.

Each individual will have an afternoon project either outside employment, assigned research projects, special classes or intramural athletics. Sunday through Thursday evenings will be devoted to studies under the supervision of a floating tutor system. The tutors will visit each boy during the evening and help him with any problem he might have or check to see that the student is cultivating good study habits.

Student Curiosity
Friday nights will be devoted to cultural or social events designed to develop the intellectual curiosity of the students and to introduce them to the aspects of University social life.

Guest dinner speakers, including local professional men will speak to the students and attempt to give them a clear outline of what their specific professions entail. Smith said he felt this would help the boys a better idea of what their field of study would entail.

University students from the various fraternities and sororities will also be invited to speak and acquaint the boys with the fraternity-sorority system and with campus activities.

Summerside House will also have regular social functions including dances, picnics and parties with girls attending Girls' State, All-State and enrolled in summer school.

Saturday to Sunday night will be free time for the boys to spend as they wish.

Full Schedule
Smith explained that the schedule would be a full one, but that it had been proven that active students are usually happier. He said as the session progressed the boys would have increasingly more freedom to use their own time as they wished.

"They will elect their own officers after they have become acquainted with each other and have adjusted somewhat to the routine," Smith remarked.

Summerside House will be self-supporting. The cost of room and board for the eight week session will be $180. In addition the student must pay summer school tuition to the University of $60 for six to nine credit hours.

Summerside is coordinated with the University specifically in that the work of the tutors will be supervised by the Division of Student Affairs. Also final authority concerning matters of academic failure or breaches of University policy will rest with the Division of Student Affairs.
