Council Reaffirms Rules Regulating Organizations

The Student Council has re-stated the requirements which student organizations must fulfill to remain in good stand-ing with the Council and to be recognized on campus.

Chip Kuklin, activity com-mittee chairman, stated that three copies of the student organization registration or activity form must be filled out in exact duplicate and re-turned to the desk of the sec-retary of the Dean of Student Affairs within ten days of every election held by the or-ganization. The forms, he said, are available only at the Division of Student Af-fairs.

Also, a copy of the organi-zation's constitution must be on file at all times at the Division of Student Affairs and the Student Council of-fice.

Finally, a copy of the or-ganization's full membership must be on file at the Council office plus a copy of the cur-rent financial report, if the organization's funds are not kept with the University.

Kuklin also outlined the steps that will be taken against an organization failing to comply with these pro-visions:

First, a letter will be sent to the adviser and president of the organization and chair-man of the department, if af-fected, requesting that the af-fected individuals contact the council or settle the deficiency in the records within 14 days.

If the letter is not answered, a second letter will be sent to the same individuals, plac-ing the organization on prob-ation for a period of 30 days. The Council at their discre-tion may also freeze the funds of the organization or remove its officers during this 30 day period.

If no action is taken within the period, a third letter is sent to the same individuals informing them that their or-ganization is no longer recog-nized on campus and that their funds are frozen.

After this step by the Coun-cil, Kuklin said, the individ-uals of the organization must take the steps necessary to begin a new organization on campus to be officially recog-nized again and to have their funds returned.

a "ward" of the University. This particular bit of idiosy is quite similar to the man who cut off his dog's tail an inch at a time because, he explained, "to cut it off all at once is much too painful for the dog."

I suppose he, too, was mistaken. I cannot help but wonder if these restrictions placed on the intelligent and mature young women of our University is not much more painful and much more dangerous than letting them come to grips with reality at the same time they and their fellow classmates who are working and living in apartments leave the warmth, protection and com-fort of home.

The only logical advantage which can be offered for "hours" is that which a friend of mine stated several years ago. "If you didn't have hours, you would be apt to run into some clown who would keep you up to 4 a.m. telling you how great he was."

If this is a real and present danger, and I suspect it may be, I suggest the Home Economics department de-velop a unit designed to as-sist co-ed in handling these situations in much the same manner that Marriage and Family relations handles the problem of matrimony and all of the inherent pitfalls therein.

Parking Issue Given Suggestion

Dear Editor:

Let's be realistic about campus parking regulations. The University is faced with a problem which can only be appreciated if you are trying to locate a park-ing place at 7:50 in the morning. In conjunction with this is the situation which exists due to the nar-rowness of the University streets and the lengths of the cars which are parked thereon. I have a suggestion to remedy the latter.

For some reason, unknown to me, the powers that be have held it as either a social blunder or an act against God and Motherhood to allow cars to back into diagonal parking spaces. There are several very basic reasons why backing into these spaces should be RE-QUIRED by University regu-lation. In the first place, the large automobiles of to-day can be maneuvered more easily when backed. (Notice how you can back into a parallel stall which is unattainable if you were to drive in.) Secondly, more street space would be pro-vided. (There is an average 8 to 12 inches of additional overhang on the rear of cars which is not present on the front. In some instances this distance approaches 15 inches. When a car was backed into the stall, this additional overhang would be located over a surface which is un-used, rather than projecting into the street.)

Finally, since the car would be parked in an "out-traffic" direction, visibility would be improved for the departing driver and less traffic snarl-up would result.

If there is a failiacy to this logic I hope it will be brought to my attention.

It can do plenty. Here's why: the Viceroy filter starts with pure, safe vegetable material, made into the same straight filter strands as most good filters.

But here's the twist: Viceroy weaves those tiny strands into the special Deep-Weave Filter . . . and that's the filter you can trust to give you the good taste of Viceroy's rich tobacco blend. The fact is . . .
