

Les Elgart, Six Bandsmen in Jail

By Mike MacLean

Les Elgart and six members of his band are being held in the Lincoln city jail on an open charge pending investigation of possible illegal possession of narcotics, according to Capt. Robert Sawdon of the Lincoln Police Department.

Capt. Sawdon said that the police were called in on the case when the subjects were reported buying more than a normal amount of restricted cough medicine that contains codeine.

Det. Arthur Aksamit made an investigation to determine who purchased the codeine and found some marijuana in two rooms at the Capital Hotel. Upon further investigation, Aksamit and Sawdon discovered marijuana in four other rooms at the Capital Hotel and in one at the Lincoln Hotel.

"An extremely large quantity of marijuana was found in the rooms; there was marijuana in the dresser of Elgart's room," Sawdon said.

A quantity of heroin was also found in an undisclosed location.

Elgart and his band played at the Homecoming Dance which was held at Pershing Auditorium Saturday night. The police did not interrupt the dance in order to avoid creating a disturbance.

Some of the band members were questioned upon their return to the hotel rooms, said Captain Sawdon.

The Les Elgart Band, which is described as possessing the "Sophisticated Swing," also played at the 1959 Military Ball and the 1961 Ak-Sar-Ben Coronation Ball.

They will be brought before the County Attorney today for disposition of the case.

Captain Sawdon said that there is no connection between this case and any possible similar activity in Lincoln.

Spirits Rise Cards Fly; $800 Lost

Students Toss Cards To 'Let Off Steam'

Money flew around the card section Saturday as students "let off steam" by tossing the card sets into the air after the halftime show.

Roy Cook, president of Gamma Lambda, honorary band fraternity and designer of the card section, said that a rough estimate of the cards lost is 200 at $4 a set. If the whole section had been lost, the cost would have run about $800.

Cook said that it started when the students started throwing the instruction sheets which had been given to them. Then one person started throwing his cards and it spread through the stands. Cook termed it a "mob action."

The Corn Cobs report that they know which section started throwing the cards. Cook said that they were able to pin-point it because they took moving pictures of the show.

No action has been taken yet; Gamma Lambda will decide upon it at their Tuesday meeting. Cook said that the cost of replacing the cards will probably be taken out of the $50 deposits made by the organized houses who sit in the card section.

The exact account of the number of cards lost will be given at the end of the week when the Corn Cobs finish the count. Many of the card sets were torn up and many were taken home as souvenirs.

Cook reported that there will be a card section for the game which falls on the Saturday of Thanksgiving vacation and that the houses in the section are required to fill that space. The card section may be cut down in size due to the lack of cards.

Cook added that on Nov. 15, movies of all the card shows will be shown in the Pan American Room at 7 p.m. All students are invited to attend.

No Quizzes Out On Ag For Dec. 9

"No tests or quizzes" for all ag students on Friday, Dec. 9, was the proclamation issued from Agricultural Hall by Dr. Franklin Eldridge, dean of resident instruction.

This provision is being made by the Ag campus administration so that all Ag students will have an opportunity to attend the second Professional Opportunities Conference for Careers related to agriculture, Thursday, Dec. 8.

This year's conference will be operated much the same as the inaugural conference of 1960 only on a wider scale, according to Dr. Eldridge.

Last year 28 different business opportunities were presented to the students by professionals from all over the country. Conference commitments have been received totaling over the 1960 number, according to Charles Adams, faculty coordinator of the conference.

Students who wish to register for the conference should register with Dr. Eldridge in Agricultural Hall by Nov. 11. Tickets for the banquet Thursday night can also be obtained at Dr. Eldridge's office and are subject to the Nov. 11th deadline date.

Her attendants were Nancy Jacobson, Alpha Omicron Pi, and Nancy Sorensen, Kappa Delta. The three coeds were announced as finalists after the effigy burning at the rally Friday night.

Miss Polenz is a member of Love Memorial Hall; Student Council; Phi Upsilon Omicron, an honorary home economics society; board member of Tassels, women's pep group; and the Independent Women Assn.

Miss Jacobson is a member of Union Board of managers, Red Cross chairman, Association of Childhood Education, and rush chairman of Alpha Omicron Pi sorority.

Standards Chairman Miss Sorensen is standards chairman of Kappa Delta sorority, Tassels junior board, Associated Women's Students board, YWCA, Miss Superior, and semi-finalist for Miss Nebraska.

Mary Burbridge, Homecoming chairman of Tassels, reported that 2700 votes were cast in the Homecoming election. Nine of them were invalid because the voter had voted for three girls instead of one. Last year 1500 votes were cast for Homecoming Queen.

John Bischoff, Homecoming publicity chairman, said that 3100 people danced to the music of Les Elgart at the Homecoming Dance. He said that it was a "very successful Homecoming!"

Regents Accept Funds For Grants, Fellowships

Nearly three-quarters of a million dollars in research, training and fellowship grants were accepted Saturday morning by the University Board of Regents.

The breakdown was $383,067 in research grants, $241,616 in training grants and $111,000 in fellowships.

Among the training grants was $159,800 from the National Science Foundation for a cooperative college teacher development plan with state colleges and universities. The program will be directed by Prof. N. H. Cromwell of the department of chemistry.

The board also approved the purchase of a $30,260 electron microscope, essential for virus and bacterial research. The new instrument will be housed at the department of microbiology at Lyman Hall and financed by a U. S. Public Health Service grant.

2nd Machine

This is the second such instrument to be purchased by the University. The first electron microscope, obtained in the late 40's is housed in the department of plant pathology at the College of Agriculture.

Dr. Carl Georgi, chairman of the microbiology department, who will be in charge of the instrument, attended the Electron Microscope School at Cornell University in 1960.

An electron microscope will magnify up to 30,000 diameters, compared to 1,000 for a light microscope. By enlarging photographic prints of the specimen, the magnification can be further increased by at least ten fold.

An electron beam, similar to a television picture tube, furnishes the source of light, which passes through the specimen and is scattered on a fluorescent plate where the image is produced.

Dr. Georgi said research with bacteria and viruses is virtually impossible without an electron microscope. He said the instrument will be used to study the internal structure of bacteria and viruses.

In other action, the Board accepted a grant of $10,500 from the state department of aeronautics to continue the University's research in the field of aerial application of agricultural chemicals. The project will be directed by Rodney W. Bovey, instructor in agronomy.

Dr. Cranford Named 'Outstanding' Advisor

Dr. Robert J. Cranford, faculty advisor for the Daily Nebraskan, was named the nation's outstanding college newspaper advisor Saturday.

He received the 1961 Distinguished Newspaper Advisor plaque at the annual convention of the National Council of College Publications Advisors meeting in Miami, Fla.

Dr. Cranford has been advisor for The Nebraskan four and a half years and is also advisor for the Cornhusker, the University yearbook.

He has been a member of the University's School of Journalism faculty since 1957 and is author of a text, "Copy Editing Workbook."

Selection was made by a six-man committee which said Dr. Cranford received high praise from students, faculty and production department personnel with whom he worked.

Dr. William E. Hall, director of the University School of Journalism, said, "Dr. Cranford is one of the finest teachers in the field of news editing in America today."

Dr. Cranford was a newspaper and wire service reporter and editor in South Carolina for 19 years. Before joining the Nebraska faculty, he was acting dean of the University of South Carolina journalism school and taught at the State University of Iowa and Northwestern University. He received his Ph.D. at the State University of Iowa in 1953.

Two Nebraska students were delegates to the convention along with Dr. Cranford.

Student Council Will Host Delegates For Big 8 Government Convention

By Tom Kotone

Fifty delegates to the Big-8 Student Government Association convention will assemble at the Nebraska Center Dec. 28-30 to discuss problems and service common to the Big-8 Universities.

"The delegates will come from all Big-8 universities," said Sukey Tinan, Student Council special Big-8 chairman, and will begin arriving Thursday evening.

Council Second Vice-President Jim Samples labeled the conference "an opportunity to revitalize the Big-8 student government ties."

At the conference, progress and crises developing in the People-to-People program will be discussed.

Representative

John Nolon, Council member and representative to the Big-8 People-to-People conference at Kansas University Oct. 28-29, said that the date had been agreed upon after speaking with six of the eight student government presidents of the Big-8 schools.

In other Council business, John Abrahamson, public relations chairman, reported that a summary of each week's Council business and a preview of the coming week's business will be posted each Monday on the bulletin boards of each college by the Council associates. A list of names and addresses of each college's Council representatives will be attached to the report.

"Students will thus not only be informed of Council efforts in behalf of the student body," Abrahamson said, "but will be better able to contact their representative in business that is of interest to them."

"The next meeting of the Council associates will be Nov. 7 in the Union," said Sukey Tinan, member of the Council associates committee.

Council Brief

"At present," Miss Tinan said, "86 of the 150 associates have been assigned to a Council committee. At the meeting Tuesday evening, three of these Council chairmen will brief the whole group on the purposes and work of their committee."

Judiciary chairman, Jim Samples, reported that a hearing on the faults of constitutions of campus organizations rejected by the Council was successful, with six of the seven concerned organizations present.

"In the next weeks we will be developing an outline of a model constitution with the rules governing its composition for distribution to all organizations on campus," Samples said.

"The outline will facilitate drafting of a new constitution or revision of the existing one," Samples added.

Don Witt, Council elections committee chairman, said that interviews will be held at next week's Council meeting to select a representative from Law College to fill the vacancy created by the dismissal of John Wightman from the Council who was removed two weeks ago from the Council for four unexcused absences.
