I feel the Chancellor possibly is making two glaring mistakes in selecting an athletic director. The first is that an athletic director should be a separate job from the coaching ranks, a man who is interested in all sports rather than just football. If we want good coaches, with our present investment in sports, then we ought to be willing to pay for them. What is the difference if a coach makes more money than a glorified salesman at Nebraska.

The second mistake would be making a selection of a man who is not qualified. What did Bill Orwig, still exerting his pressure here, do as far as bringing Nebraska into the national spotlight again?

The Big Ten and West Coast schools usually select a board of two alumni, two faculty members, two students, and its president to make such important selections. At Nebraska, we have such a secretive system that it is no wonder things get so goofed up. We'd like to see such a board set up here with men who know a little bit about athletics serving on it.

Athletics at NU have been second rate since 1941 and will continue to be such until we get men who can handle and lead men and women of Nebraska. We need the type of leadership that Henry Schulte gave us; the drive and sacrifice to achievement.

The Old Pro still feels that Bill Jennings has given an outstanding effort. I only hope that he doesn't go through the hell that Bill Glassford did and, if he is resigning, that he does it right away. Bill has denied rumors that his house is sold and he will leave by December 1. Bill, it isn't worth having drunks and antagonists call up your family and make insulting remarks; it isn't worth having "experts" in football hanging you in effigy. All of this isn't fair to the school and to you. If you don't plan to stay, announce this so that the "experts" will get off your back.

To the football team — I think it's high time you quit bickering and start playing for Bill in the last three games. Bill is only human and makes mistakes. But you, as a football team, might dedicate yourself to win the last three for a man who has tried and apparently been defeated.

A note to all effigy hangers—we still might have a necktie party for our sterling athletic director selection committee. Just think, it will be the first party involving somebody besides a coach.

Predictions: Nebraska by 21 over Iowa State; athletic director selected from among second raters with Jack Curtice as leading contender; another long four years to look forward to.

International Dinner

An international student banquet will be held 6 p.m. Thursday evening in the Pan American Room of the Union under sponsorship of the campus Council on Religion.

WICKED LAS VEGAS:

IS IT TRUE THAT ANYTHING GOES? We've got bank vice presidents who come to gamble, people with women who are not their wives! So says a Las Vegas businessman. Where do they draw the line? In this week's Post, you'll read the shocking story—"How Wicked is Vegas?"
