

Cousins—No Extermination Without Representation

Special to Daily Nebraskan
By Kay Overton
Executive Editor,
The Daily Illini

"The people of the world have a right to demand 'No extermination without representation,'" said Norman Cousins, editor of the Saturday Review, in a university forum speech delivered at the University of Illinois this week.

"I see no reason to decree that we must be either Red or dead," Cousins commented. "Rather we must be alive and free. But we must also work hard to accomplish this end."

Cousins stated his belief that the American populace was being "kidded" on the actual dangers of a nuclear war. "When Dr. Libby (former member of the Atomic Energy Commission) says 90 to 95 per cent of the populace will survive a thermonuclear war, without making any qualifications to that statement, then I think the American people are being kidded.

"The most painful idea of our time is that we may lose our world," Cousins continued. "I am afraid that the human plight is being lacerated as it has never been lacerated before. As a net result, I wonder if we know what we are creating for our children to face."

Cousins pointed out a rise in the order of power has resulted in a lessened control of that power. "The advocacy of a powerful idea is where security begins and regardless of what you hear, ideas do get through."

Citing personal travels through Soviet Russia, Cousins said there is no people "more warmly predisposed toward the United States than those in the U.S.S.R. However, we must distinguish between government and people."

Referring to the current controversy over fallout shelters, Cousins again cited comments by Dr. Libby calling for compulsory individual construction of such structures, this to be accomplished, if necessary, under martial law. He termed the responsibility of building such structures to be the Federal government's.

"If a function of the Federal government is not the responsibility to protect its citizens, pray tell where does the government's function lie? If shelters make sense at all, then it is the government's responsibility to construct them," he said.

In the race for survival, Cousins stated "The human race is going to have to make it out in the open or not at all. We must create a moratorium on trivia."

Playwrighting Contest Attracts Fifty-Five Scripts

Fifty-two scripts have been entered this year in the annual Nebraska National Playwrighting contest sponsored by the University Theater.

The scripts were the contributions of 44 authors in 19 states. They have been forwarded for reading by a panel of five judges who are playwrights and teachers of playwrighting at the universities of Oregon, Purdue, Pennsylvania State and at the state colleges of Missouri and California.

The winning script will receive the Fred Ballard Memorial prize, an award named after Nebraska's most successful Broadway playwright who is best remembered for New York successes as "Ladies of the Jury" and "Believe Me, Xantippis."

The Nebraska National Playwrighting contest has been revived and redesigned by Prof. Joseph Baldwin, University faculty member. Baldwin himself a contributor to the playwrighting contest in the 1940's, revived the contest, he said, as a contribution to culture and as a "personal crusade."

Baldwin is a former winner of the national playwrighting contest sponsored by Johns Hopkins University as well as contests as the Birmingham Festival of Arts Award and the Texas Playwrights Award.

Dr. Baldwin cites the difference in the Nebraska playwrighting contest as time. He said the winner of the first $100 prize has the opportunity to come to the campus to see a staged reading of his play and then has several weeks to rewrite the script in order to submit a finished version for the additional $200 Fred Ballard Award.

Dr. Baldwin added that the Ballard contests have helped give the University a national reputation for sponsorship of creative activity in dramatic art.

Crash Kills Hans; Funeral Tuesday

Bruce Hans, a 20-year-old Princeton University student from Lincoln, was injured fatally on a flight from Poughkeepsie, N.Y., to Trenton, N.J.

Hans graduated from Lincoln Southeast High School in 1959 and was well known to many University Students. He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Hans, 1538 East Manor Drive.

Hans took off alone in a small plane late Sunday night, and was reported missing early Monday, when he did not arrive at Trenton.

The wreckage of his plane, which had crashed into Storm King Mountain, near West Point, N.Y., was sighted by search planes Friday. His body was recovered Saturday.

Funeral services will be at 2 p.m. Tuesday at Westminster Presbyterian Church.

Four Attend Institute in Washington

Four University architecture students are attending the student forum for the American Institute of Architects in Washington, D.C., Nov. 18-24.

The four students selected to attend are: Tom Laging, Dick Williams, Gary Harley and Bob Douglas.

The forum, which is limited to juniors and seniors in the field of architecture, is made up of students from throughout the United States. Those attending are chosen by fourth and fifth-year architectural students in their respective colleges.

The expenses for the trip are partially paid by the national and local NIA. In addition to the trip to Washington, the delegates will participate in several side trips on their way to and from the conference.

Friends Service Interviews Today

Warren Witte, the midwest representative for the American Friends Service committee will hold a coffee hour and interviews today for students interested in the summer and year-around projects of the committee.

The organization conducts projects in human relations and community service in migrant camps, factories, slums, Indian reservations and mental hospitals.

The coffee hour will be held in 335, Student Union at 3 p.m. Interviews will be held from 9-12 a.m., 4-6 p.m., and 7-10 p.m.

Interested persons may sign up for an interview in the YWCA office, 335, Student Union. Qualifications vary from project to project.

Student Election Rules Revised by Student Council

Student Council elections chairman Don Witt presented a revised copy of rules for all University elections as part of earlier action taken by the council to prevent "election irregularities."

According to the revised regulations, organizations holding all-University elections (or elections involving more than one college) must publish voter eligibility requirements and polling places "adequately" prior to the election.

"These voter eligibility requirements must then be strictly adhered to," said Witt. "In other words, no person shall be allowed to vote without his student ID card when one is required for any reasons."

Another ruling stating that the sponsoring organization must closely "check the eligibility of candidates when requirements have been set up", was questioned by a Council member on the basis of its completeness.

"It is still possible," Witt pointed out, "for the sponsoring organization to change the eligibility requirements prior to interviews and without any notice to candidates or groups concerned."

"Council members will continue to supervise all University elections, providing help and advice when called upon," Witt said.

A copy of these regulations will be sent all organizations sponsoring all university elections.

Grant to Boost Corn Research

The University corn research program may be boosted by a $60,000 Rockefeller Foundation grant.

The grant, of which only $10,000 has been formally accepted by the University, will be used to combine American corn with varieties from Mexico, Columbia, and Brazil.

Studies of genetic variance will then be made, under the direction of Dr. J. H. Lonnquist.

The grant will cover a five-year period.

The hybrid corn would be used by Latin American students working here for advanced degrees in plant breeding and genetics, under a special training program directed by Dr. Lonnquist.

Formal acceptance of the grant by the Board of Regents must wait until a budget is drawn up.
