Undergrad Students Register This Week

The final week for undergraduate early registration is Jan. 8-12.

All students who have not seen their advisers or completed their worksheets should do so by Friday. Students who have not turned in their worksheets by then will have to pull their own cards.

On Jan. 17, 18 and 19 appointment cards for paying fees will be handed out in the Pan-American room of the Student Union. All students who have pre-registered must pick up an appointment card. Fees will be paid Jan. 29, 30, 31. This will include junior division and well as upper-class students.

All registrations which have not been completed by that time will be cancelled. If a student has pre-registered, but fails to pay his fees on the appointed days, his registration will be cancelled and he will have to pull cards and take whatever courses are left.

Don Burt of the Student Council registration committee reminded students to arrange their fee paying time so it will not conflict with final examinations.

Worksheets must be turned into the appropriate place: Arts and Sciences students, 208 Administration; Agriculture students, 207 Agricultural Hall; Business Administration students, 210 Social Sciences; Engineering and Architecture students, 208 Administration and Teachers College students, consult advisers for further information.

Burt said, "The Student Council registration committee strongly urges all students to turn in their worksheets on time. This will save the student much time and effort during the busy final exam period."

Big 8 Council Elects Nolon

John Nolon, Student Council chairman of public issues, was elected vice president of the Big Eight Student Government Association meeting at the Nebraska Center, Dec. 28 to 30.

The new president is John Pilkington of the University of Missouri and recording secretary, Toni Acosta, Oklahoma State University.

The over 50 delegates in attendance revised the Big Eight Student Government Association (BESGA) constitution, combining drafts submitted by Nebraska's Student Council and Iowa State's student government.

A debate and discussion on the purposes of the National Student Association (NSA) between NSA president Ed Garvey of Philadelphia, Pa., and Kay Wonderlic, a former Northwestern University student who heads an organization opposed to the NSA, stimulated discussion among the delegates.

Nebraska, who dropped its membership in the NSA in the early 1950's, could take action to re-affiliate upon vote of the Student Council and application to the Division of Student Affairs.

Delegates also voted to hold their next meeting at the University of Missouri between Dec. 25 and Jan. 1, 1962.

Difference Of Opinion On Budget

Total Request Never Granted: Marvel

By Mike MacLean

"There was an honest difference of opinion on the budget for the University for this biennium, and there always will be," stated State Senator Richard Marvel, Chairman of the Budget Committee.

"In my experience, the total University request has never been granted," he continued. The Legislature must attempt to allocate the state's resources fairly among the 55 agencies of the state."

"The decision on the 1961-1963 budget has already been made, the figure cannot be changed," he added.

"In the 1959-1961 budget the University got a $4 million dollar raise, from $21 million to $25 million. Almost all of this raise was used to increase instructors salaries," he stated. "For the 1961-1963 budget, the University requested a 22% increase and received an 11% increase. There was no budget cut, as some of the headlines have stated," Marvel stated.

He continued, "As chairman of the committee, I am hoping to schedule meetings with the University officials, both formal and informal, to discuss the University's problems. I think that these problems should be studied continuously, not just six months out of every year."

When asked for a possible solution, Marvel stated, "Legislators should have an opportunity to meet the faculty, so that the two groups could become better acquainted with each other's problems. Legislators should be invited to speak at campus meetings and students should be encouraged to attend the legislature when it is in session."

Senator Fern Hubbard Orme, a woman senator from Lincoln who also was on the budget committee, had this to say:

"As I see it the budget request approved by the Board of Regents and presented by Chancellor Hardin recognized the needs of a growing institution devoted to comprehensive research, textive services and classroom instruction. I regret the budget committee members did not approve the entire amount."

AUF Blanks Ready

Application blanks for All University Fund (AUF) chairmanship and assistantship may be picked up today on the bulletin board outside 334 Student Union.

Application forms are due Jan. 11 and should be returned to 334 Union. Position interviews will be held Jan. 13 beginning at 8 a.m.

Regents Plan Actions To Increase Housing

Three actions aimed at relieving the on-campus housing shortage were authorized Saturday by the Board of Regents:

—Approval was given for the immediate issue of $9.5 million of revenue bonds as part of an overall $16 million issue proposed for the next five years in connection with several dormitory building projects.

—The purchase of the Assenmacher Construction Company buildings and land near 17th and Vine was announced. The property is on the west side of 17th and will be used as a site for future men's dormitories.

—A 10 per cent increase in rates for the University's residence halls was voted for the coming school year.

Twin Towers The revenue from the sale of the $9.5 million in bonds will be used to construct a $4,716,000 dormitory and food service facility known as the Twin Towers project. The remaining $4,784,000 will be used to refund outstanding bonds of the 1953, 1956 and 1959 issues.

Comptroller Joseph Soshnik said the combining of the bond issues into one will reduce financial accounting complexities and will lead to more flexible management of housing facilities.

Under the terms of the overall issue, the University has until 1967 to issue the additional $6.5 million of bonds which will be used to finance future dormitory construction. The bonds will be secured by a lien on revenues from the University's residence halls and food-service facilities and from a portion of the student fees for the Student Union and Health Center.

Housing

The Twin Tower dormitories will house 960 students. At present 3,620 students (not including those who live with parents) are required to find their own housing off-campus because campus living units are filled.

The Assenmacher property which was purchased is directly northwest of the Twin Towers project. It is 175 feet square and holds an office, garages, lumber sheds and a material yard.

Carl Donaldson, University business manager, said that owners of the company are planning to liquidate the business this month and had offered the property to the University.

The cost of the land is approximately 57 cents per square foot.

Increase

The ten percent dormitory increase, which becomes effective next fall, will mean that students will pay $660 — an increase of $60 — to live and eat in University-operated dormitories. The rate is based on 20 meals per week for the school year.

The Board also voted a $5 per month increase for married-student housing on the College of Agriculture campus, effective Sept. 1.

The cost will be raised from $70 to $75 per month for one-bedroom apartments and from $80 to $85 per month for two-bedroom apartments.

Chancellor Clifford Hardin said the increase was necessary because of the higher operational building costs. He said the present rate is inadequate to take care of equipment replacement.

Chancellor Hardin said the Nebraska rates have been among the lowest throughout the Big Eight. Other rates for the present year compared with Nebraska's $600, are: Colorado, $710; Iowa State $660; Kansas, $652; Kansas State, $660; Missouri, $670; Oklahoma, $560 and Oklahoma State, $588.

All of the Big Eight schools, except Iowa State and Kansas State, have indicated that they plan to increase their rates for the coming year, according to W. C. Harper, director of University Services.

Builders Applications

Builders applications are available and may be picked up at the Builders office, 342 Student Union. Anyone who has been a Builder's member for at least one semester may apply. Applications are due Wednesday, Jan. 17. Interviews will be held Jan. 20.

Mortar Board Grants Total $150

Two $150 fellowships, made available by the 1961-62 Mortar Boards will be awarded to one woman and one man for the 1962-63 academic year.

These fellowships are to be awarded on the basis of academic performance and interest in the major field of study during the last year or two of undergraduate work. Prospective recipients must be planning to do graduate work beginning either in June or Sept., 1962.

Students who are interested in making application should call at the Graduate Office, 306 Administrative Building.

NU Regents Name Elliott President

NEW HEADS MEET

The two new officers heading the University's Board of Regents this year, J. G. Elliott (right), president, and Richard Adkins, vice-president, meet after being named to their respective positions.

The University Board of Regents chose J. G. Elliott of Scottsbluff as the 1962 Board Regents president. He succeeds Regent Clarence E. Swanson, who served as president during 1961.

The Board also elected Richard Adkins of Osmond as vice president at their annual reorganizational meeting. John K. Selleck of Lincoln was re-elected corporation secretary and Joseph Soshnik, University comptroller, was re-elected assistant corporation secretary.

The Regents also approved a three percent increase in the 1962 Summer Sessions budget. The coming summer's budget will be $378,200 or $11,135 more than the previous year.

Director Frank E. Sorenson estimated that more than $8,000 of the increase would be in slightly higher salaries. He reported that the income from the 1962 session in student fees will total about $193,000 or $13,400 more than in the 1961 session.

In other action the Board: —Accepted the resignation of Dr. Hilton Salhanick, associate professor at the College of Medicine.

—Approved the appointments of Dr. John Davis as a visiting professor of geography from the University of London; Dr. Paul Hodgson, as professor of surgery at the College of Medicine; Robert Florell as a coordinator of conferences and institutes at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

—Appointed Eugene Ingram, director of purchases as military property custodian, with authority to sign all documents having to do with the acquisition of disposition of military property assigned to the University. The Board also appointed Robert George a member of the purchasing department, as assistant military property custodian.

—Accepted a gift of stock, valued at $6,850, from an anonymous donor. The fifth is unrestricted.

—Accepted research and training grants totaling $422,717.

Deaf Children Learn to Speak

By Karen Sass

Deaf children are learning to speak for the first time in a special program on the University campus. This is one of the many services of the University Speech and Hearing Laboratory.

Approximately 100 to 150 pre-school and schoolage speech and hearing handicapped children are helped each year according to Lucille Cypreans, assistant professor of speech and advisor of the clinic.

"These children are referred to us by doctors, social workers, visiting nurses and other agencies for diagnostic testing," she said. "We then refer them to other services and often they come back to us for therapy."

The children's clinic however is only a portion of the program offered by the laboratory. University students and other adults with speech and hearing defects are also referred to the clinic. Two courses for credit are offered to foreign students in which they learn how to pronounce English correctly.

Cooperative

New this year are the laboratory's cooperative programs with the neurological and psychiatric department of the School of Medicine in Omaha and with the cleft palate clinic in the Dental College.

The most common type of defect diagnosed and treated is that of articulatory difficulties in which sounds are omitted or confused. Voice problems are second in frequency.

"Although we are certainly interested in helping these people, the primary purpose of the clinic is to provide practice for the undergraduate speech therapy major," Miss Cypreans pointed out.

The American Speech and Hearing Association requires that a speech therapy graduate have 200 hours of clinical practice. The undergraduate student works primarily with children at first but by graduation he has gained a great deal of experience in working with adults. There are about 70 students in the training program at present.

No Toys

According to Miss Cypreans the clinic's greatest problem is the lack of books and toys which are used in the children's clinic.

"You teach these children to speak correctly by communicating through toys," she explained, "and we have no appropriation for such materials."

This year members of the speech therapy service honorary, Sigma Alpha Eta, gave talks to organized houses about the clinic, making a request for materials, and also appeared on a local TV program explaining the need for these toys.

The clinic received 20% of All University Fund this year.

The Speech and Hearing Laboratory does not have any great means of financial support outside of the support it receives from the state.

No Charge

There is no charge for diagnosis at the clinic and only a modest charge for therapy for children and non-University adults.

"The University of Nebraska Speech and Hearing Laboratory may not be too well known on campus but it has national fame other universities look up to," Miss Cypreans said. "We have the reputation of having one of the best undergraduate programs in the country."

All members of the faculty have taught out of state and are advanced members of the American Speech and Hearing Association. Dr. Burgi is a fellow in the organization, an honor which is given only to outstanding workers of the field.

A textbook written by several members of the staff is being used all over the country and was recently adopted by Northwestern University.

The clinic, which began in 1940 as one desk in Temple building, now occupies several offices on the first floor and a whole section of second floor.
