

in passing...

They say "old soldiers never die..." and I think the same phrase could be applied to old Rag staff members. The only thing that breaks the tie with the Rag's basement office is eviction (some call it graduation) from the campus.

It seems that during this first week of publication I have found myself several times in the midst of the busy Rag crew, who surprisingly enough, seemed to be functioning quite efficiently without me. It's always a blow to find that someone else is capable (probably more so) of filling the position which once belonged to you.

In an attempt to console me, editor Ferg consented to allow me to frequent his editorial page.

I had several people approach me last week and express the opinion that the Student Union was finally going high class with their "big name" entertainment.

They were referring to the Thursday evening performances of jazz artist Ahmad Jamal. It seems there are students on the campus who prefer a real jazz artist such as Jamal to "The Brothers 4" or even George Shearing.

It is hard to satisfy the tastes of the entire campus population with any single program but the next "big name" attraction which the Union will present in April comes the closest of any program the Union has ever offered.

The April billing is for a quartet known as "The 4 Saints," a new group introduced to the Ag and city union program councils at the Region 8 Student Union Convention held in Kansas City in December.

The "Saints" performance rated a standing ovation from the crowd and, in my estimation, any entertainment group has to be more than just good to get a standing ovation from 300 college students.

Extremely versatile is the best phrase describing "The Saints." The four of them play 16 different instruments and all of them sing. The quartet does everything from Kingston Trio music to barber shop to opera!

(P.S. I rarely get so enthused about entertainers.)

It seems the term "moderation" is applicable in any situation or movement now days. Even the liberals and conservatives seem to adhere to some degree of moderation.

I noted in an article appearing in the World Herald last week that Sen. Barry Goldwater, Mr. Conservative himself, even admitted that it was necessary to drive off the extremists who were being attracted to the Conservative movement. He said there are a certain number of "idiots" who are always attracted to a movement in its beginnings. Goldwater continued that these persons are currently being attracted to the conservative movement just as they were to the liberalist movement of the early 1930's.

Asked whether he was referring to the John Birch Society, his answer indicated objection not to the society in particular, but any group that was extreme. He cited the leadership of Robert Welch as his only objection to the John Birch Society. Goldwater possibly considers Welch as one of the extremists as he described him as "intemperate" and "unwise."

By the way, Sen. Goldwater will be visiting our campus next month. While in Lincoln he will address an All University convocation in the Coliseum. I would think this convocation would be of interest to everyone, even Mr. Muenster and his Young Democrats. There's an old saying, you know, about there being two sides to every question.

This weekend could be a great preview to Spring complete with slight attacks of spring fever and sundeck hours.

But as the sun comes up in the east on Saturday morning resolutions for rigid weekend study hours to boost second semester averages set in the West.

In passing — Good luck you all; I know I'll need it.

Dear Editor:

The editorial published Febr. 7, 1962 concerning the student council is outstanding and the writer deserves to be commended. It must take courage to step out of the strict pattern on honest opinion.

If the Student Body is "grossly misinformed" the fault must be in disinterest or lack of information. How can any "lowly" student be interested in subjects which are reserved only for the elite and are evidently so far above the meager average intelligence on this campus that they couldn't be understood in any event?

It is due time that the Student Council received the credit which they so justly deserve. Before credit can be given to either side, all parties concerned must be on the same level. Open your eyes Student Council and let us in on all the secrets.

Aristocratic governing is not the solution. The students want the vote. An "Insulted" Student

COMMANDMENT NO. 8

On Mr. Moses and Cheating

Chairman: Our principal business today is consideration of a draft statement for the Ten Commandments — especially for Commandment No. 8 — which deals with stealing, as written by Mr. Moses. Since this statement was delivered to you by runners in advance of the meeting, let us assume that all of us have read it. So, if there is no objection, we will first have comments on the statement as a whole and then consider it word by word. Are there any general comments?

Mr. Benjamin: The statement is too long. The students and faculty at good old Mt. Sinai University won't even look at a statement as long as this. And President Sphinx would be appalled.

Mr. Judah: In the first paragraph, where it says: "You shall not steal, nor deal falsely; nor shall you lie to one another," what about the matter of selling stolen final examinations? Shouldn't something about that be included?

Chairman: How would you word that addition?

Mr. Judah: Well, the stolen examinations could be distributed to those students with quiz files.

Chairman: Will the secretary please read what he has down on that?

Secretary: "You shall not steal, nor deal falsely; nor shall you lie to one another; and if you steal examinations, they must be sold only to those who have quiz files."

Mr. Israel: Eighth paragraph, line one: "You shall not steal, etc." Are we in a position to make such a positive statement? Making the final decision is not the function of this committee.

Mr. Jehu: I agree. I suggest the following reading: "In our opinion, students should not steal, deal falsely, nor tell little fibs; and if you, etc."

Chairman: All in favor of this change will say "Me."

Mr. Aaron: Before we vote on that, I feel the lack in this statement of any motivation. Who are we? And why are we saying anything at all on this subject? I don't quite know how to word it but there ought to be something here about our basic educational purpose and objectives.

Chairman: I see Mr. Judah has been busy writing. Do you have a wording for this addition?

Mr. Judah: How about this? "As students and members of the academic community, guardians of the Commandments vouchsafed at Mt. Sinai and since approved by the Student Council and the Class of 1290, B.C., it is our opinion, etc."

Mr. Israel: That sounds presumptuous. We are not the only students and members of the academic community. We have no right to speak for everybody, including the faculty.

Mr. Judah: You are probably right. How about this? "As the Cheating Committee on the Ten Commandments, and as one one-thousandth of one per cent of the academic community, and speaking only for ourselves, we are on the whole of the opinion, etc."

Mr. Benjamin: I'm not quite satisfied with that reference to telling little fibs. Let's be realistic. If everyone in the whole university were to quit telling fibs, we'd have to cancel all scholarships, eliminate most of the dating, and fire the athletic department. The Alumni would never stand for that.

Mr. Jehu: Mr. Chairman, I move that a sub-committee be appointed to re-draft Mr. Moses' statement, taking into account the suggestions made here, and that we meet again after the new moon to reconsider this whole section, including the revision.

Mr. Eliphaz: I hope the sub-committee will take into their consideration that the comma in the third line from the top ought to be a semi-colon.

Mr. Aaron: Yes, and I hope that when the revision is prepared for final advance distribution, it will be written on papyrus paper instead of stone. It's awfully hard to re-use these old tablets in the University Johns.

Chairman: Thank you very much, gentlemen. I think that we all want to thank Mr. Moses for his very fine preliminary statement. At our next meeting I hope that we can come up with something that is really good. Meanwhile, let's all remember that our God Elohim is counting on us to tell Him what we want Him to command. Shall we close our meeting with a friendship circle as we stand to sing our University anthem, "There Is No Place Like Sinai." All together, now.

University Pastor, UCCF.

THE BELL TELEPHONE COMPANIES SALUTE: MARTIN CAWLEY

When Martin Cawley joined Illinois Bell Telephone Company a year and a half ago, he immediately was assigned to a job in the Building Engineer's Group. This work involved preparing plans and specifications for remodeling several floors of an important telephone office building, and following details of the field work until the job was completed. A lot of responsibility, but he handled it well and earned an assignment as Project Engineer. Now he handles still more complex building projects, each contributing to better telephone service for Chicago.

Martin Cawley and other young engineers like him in Bell Telephone Companies throughout the country help bring the finest communications service in the world to the homes and businesses of a growing America.
