Husker gymnastics captain Chuck Williams, this week's star of the week, may have gotten a slow start with the team, but he really moved once he got going.

In the All-College Invitational gymnastics meet last weekend at Boulder, Williams entered three events and placed in all three. He took third in the thirty-foot rope climb, fourth in free exercise, and third in tumbling. He greatly aided the Nebraska point total as the Huskers copped the All-College crown.

"I came out seriously for gymnastics in my sophomore year," says Chuck. "That year I was second high point man for the squad. Last year I was second again, this year I was third — competition's rougher," he added.

Coach Jake Geier said, "Willy is a consistent, solid competitor. We couldn't win without him. He always executes a perfect routine, even under pressure."

Willy graduated in 1957 from Ainsworth High School with two letters in basketball, three in track, three in football, and no experience in gymnastics. When he came to Nebraska, he enrolled in Agricultural Extension and went out for gymnastics "Because I wanted to go out for some sport, and I was attracted to gymnastics," Williams recalls.

He had already taught himself front handsprings, so the first night of practice Larry Brown, a tumbler, had him doing back handsprings.

—Meet the Coach Series— Improvement in NU Sports Program Foreseen by New Business Manager

Taking over for the late A. J. Lewandowski as athletic business manager is Bill Fisher, who thinks that athletics at Nebraska are on the way up.

Fisher came to Nebraska from an industrial position and served as the University Internal Auditor before taking his present position.

"As far as spectator appeal, the pro-type of football has it over college," says Fisher.

"However," Fisher continues, "with a winning football team, attendance will be no problem at Nebraska, as we have a hard-core loyal fan who buys a ticket, win or lose.

"If we can add one more fan who buys a ticket with a winner to every three of the hard-core type, we can fill our present stadium," says Fisher.

FISHER

"In addition to the won-loss record, lack of general fan interest in the sport, and the price of the ticket result in football supporting all other sports programs," he stated. If all sports absorbed their share of athletic administrative overhead, it would be difficult for any sport except football to show a profit, regardless of attendance, according to Fisher.

Concerning athletics' gross, Fisher says, "If all present facilities are used to the saturation point, athletics' gross take would run around one million dollars with a $200,000 profit available for athletic scholarships and other purposes."

Fisher states that without outside contributions scholarships would take at least $160,000. Under the best conditions outside contributions are necessary if we are to maintain a competitive recruiting program and set aside money to improve our physical plant.

The knothole program in football is an excellent way to generate early interest in football and stimulate attendance, he pointed out.

"My new job has been made easier by the continuing loyalty of the crews who handle the football and basketball crowds," concluded Fisher.

Winning the Madison County, Illinois, table tennis tournament in the doubles division was Fisher's principal athletic accomplishment, he related smilingly. He was also a professional pianist at one time.

The Old Pro

What does it take to build a winning basketball team in intramurals? I suppose every team on campus asks this once during a season. In my opinion, these are the ingredients.

The first thing required is selection of a man on your team who knows basketball. Many teams miss fundamentals and lack coordination and for this reason, they are not a consistent winner.

The second thing that must be done is have team members who are willing to put in a little time practicing and have the ability to listen in order to correct their faults.

This fact alone may bring a team from a second rate spot to a championship. Knowing what the other players are doing is important in offense as well as defense.

A good example of this is a little town which has a Class A City League. Clatonia won the championship the past two seasons prior to this one, and wound up second this year. They had a minimum of material but a maximum of practice.

The third thing a team must do is play good competition outside the regular intramural schedule. Take a check of the top ten teams and you'll find Navy R.O.T.C., Sigma Phi Epsilon, Kappa Sigma, Dental College, and Sigma Chi had tough road schedules playing B teams throughout the state. Thus five of the top six teams had more competition than just intramurals.

Fourth, the material present on the team must be such as to handle all situations. Height as well as shooting ability must be present. Development of shooting must come from the individual, height is blessed to some and not to other teams. This combination must be present to be a top winner however.

Last, attitude is the most important factor. Great basketball players will be just mediocre if they have the wrong attitude. Cooperation and a willingness to play together are the inseparable items few teams have.

A winning team isn't blessed to a fraternity, an independent, or a Selleck team, it's built out of hard work of the individuals that are playing together for a common goal — winning.

Returning Lettermen, Transfer, Soph Bolster Netters' Aim to Improve Mar

By AL SPORE

The 1962 Nebraska tennis prospects reported for opening drills last week. Three returning lettermen, several good sophomore prospects and the addition of transfer Jim Fowler compose this year's roster.

Lettermen Dave Wohlforth, Jack Lausterer, and Tom Johnson who played one, two and three, respectively, last spring will lead the Husker hopes to improve on their 1-11 dual record and last place finish in the conference last year.

Three sophomores, Dick Gibson, Rich Harley, and Russ Daub, along with former Wesleyan ace Fowler, will provide plenty of competition for the three returnees for the top five spots.

Ralph Queen and Roy Howlett of Coach Ed Higginbotham's last year squad also are returnees.

Coach Higginbotham will begin his 12th year as Husker tennis coach. The assistant physical education professor came to Nebraska in 1943 and piloted the NU tennis team to their highest Big Eight finish with a 4th place in 1959.

The Huskers have a lighter schedule this year with only ten dual meets slated and trips to only Omaha and Kansas State, plus the Big Eight meet at Lawrence, Kan. The usual southern swing for the netters was called off due to the late NU spring vacation.

The '62 schedule:

- April 6 (F) Wichita in Lincoln
- April 11 (W) Creighton in Lincoln
- April 12 (F) Open
- April 14 (S) Kansas State at Manhattan
- April 26 (Th) Omaha U. at Omaha
- April 29 (S) Kansas U. in Lincoln
- May 1 (T) Washburn in Lincoln
- May 4 (F) Creighton at Omaha
- May 5 (T) Drake in Lincoln
- May 15 (T) Omaha U. in Lincoln
- May 18-19 (F-S) Big Eight at Lawrence, Kans.

Frosh Mermen Finish 3rd

The Husker's freshman tank team finished third in the Big Eight postal championships.

Oklahoma took team honors with 130½ points, Iowa State was second with 65½ points. Nebraska finished third, only three and one-half points behind Iowa, with 62 points.

Kansas had 29 points, Colorado scored 21 points, and Kansas State managed 16 points.

Keefe Ludwig put Nebraska in contention with Iowa State for second place by churning two first places in the 1500-meter freestyle, 220-yard free style, and the 100-yard freestyle.

Ludwig's three wins were all new records for the Huskers. The former Omahan took the 1500 in 19:29.4, the 220 in 2:08.9 and the 100 in :51.1.
