

J-SCHOOL

Top In The Nation

Journalism School has brought a new honor upon itself and the University. Being named first place in the Hearst Competition is definitely a measure of the quality of the school — and more definitely, a measure of a new program within the school — Depth Reporting.

The articles that were submitted, with a couple of exceptions, came from the depth course taught by Neale Cople. The course has been primarily "his baby" and he has written his own text for the course, to be released later this year.

The articles written by Nebraska's students were printed in major newspapers across the United States. Hal Brown's story on Scholarships in the Big 8 was featured in the Denver Post, the Des Moines Register and several others.

The Daily Nebraskan is very pleased to have presented all of the winning articles to its readers upon their release.

Special recognition should go to Hal Brown, former Nebraskan Sports Editor, who placed second in the nation. We are also pleased to have Wendy Rogers, our own staff writer, among the winners.

Journalism School at Nebraska has definitely taken on all of the aspects of being "top" in the Nation. Under Dr. William E. Hall's direction, and with the outstanding faculty with which he works, it is evident that the program offered at Nebraska has produced some outstanding writers and has now gained national prominence.

About Nebraska Again

The primary elections in Nebraska are over. As we go to press, we have no indication as to the victors. But we are publishing, today, an exclusive interview with both Governor Frank Morrison and candidate Fred Seaton. We have attempted to get their views on Mr. Roger Dickeson's story on Nebraska, and to see if there was a slim chance of there being an election on issues and not who coerced who and personalities.

We also are presenting another in our series of "depth" reports on Nebraska and its people. It is a view of one of the University professors, and as he reminded us, it is not to be taken as fact, but it is probably the best opinion on the state that we have seen in a long time.

We also noted yesterday that Democratic candidate for Governor, Mrs. Ralph Brooks, who actually has been the only candidate that really promoted any issues in the primary, spoke out endorsing Dickeson's article.

Mrs. Brooks reassured Senator Richard Marvel and Governor Morrison in the article that "jumping up and down in studied indication will not cause the problems of education, labor legislation, tax reform and government reorganization to disappear."

Probably the best thing that she said is that we must first recognize our faults and problems before we can solve them.

We are all critical of our state, but we also fail to promote constructive programs to combat these deficiencies.

But now the race for governor is narrowed down. We now know who the candidates will be. If we really want a state that is not "too timid to live" or so conservative or unrealistic that we walk backward into the future, we must analyze and force these candidates to express concrete ideas for the state's future.

We must also force these candidates to stop skirting the issues as they have, to stop the cute and actually sickening game of the politician by making the election one of personalities.

We also, would like to urge you, the student, to hear Roger Dickeson this Thursday, 7 p.m., in the Pan American Room of the Student Union. He will discuss a vital question—the partisan legisla-

YD Agrees With Dickeson

Dear Sir:
Who can but agree with the outlook of Nebraska's life given by Mr. Dickeson when the documented facts are presented? What can the Republican leaders who so vehemently denounced Ted Sorenson's statements as untrue say when the truth is now so evident?

I must agree wholeheartedly with Mr. Dickeson when he says that the greatest dangers of our state's future arise from Nebraska's own right than from the leftist ideas of foreign countries. When natives of this state come to a full realization of this peril and attack it as religiously as they do communism, Nebraska will begin to make progress.

I hasten to state that we must always continue our fight against communism so long as it exists on this earth, but we must also be aware of and wage warfare against the anti-progressive attitude which is so dominant in Nebraska.

The Daily Nebraskan is to be highly commended for devoting so much space to this issue which is of such vital concern to the young Nebraskans here at the University.

Sincerely,
Gary Thompson

Hong Kong

Editor,
Recently, we have been reading news from Hong Kong about how refugees are being deported back to the communist Chinese Mainland. To facilitate your gaining a fuller understanding of the situation, I will say something about this.

Before the communist took over the Chinese Mainland, Hong Kong depended entirely on trade with the rest of China. After 1949, such trade was practically closed. At the same time, refugees from all over China poured in. To feed the increased population, Hong Kong began to develop light industries — mainly textile. It was very successful and the living standard improved greatly. For those who have been to Hong Kong before, they will certainly agree that it is a, if not the most, beautiful, modernistic and extremely fascinating city. Since it is a free port, one can get anything—luxurious or common, from the East or from the West — from this less than 400 sq. mile area. Therefore, people there began to exclaim emotionally:

"Hong Kong, The Fragrant Harbour, is indeed the Pearl of the Orient!" So far so good.

The main markets for Hong Kong light industrial products were England and the United States of America. But their products competed with that of the U.S. and England. Therefore, England acted first and set limit for importation of Hong Kong products. The United States followed such a policy just about two months ago. With revenues for the people's income narrowing from all sides, with no help from any country in this planet, with refugees still pouring in at a rate of about 130,000 per year, with the natural population growth of the three million people already there, what can people in Hong Kong do?

Indeed, turning back the refugees is an utmost inhumane act. Many a refugee fainted at the border and had to be carried back like a dead man — perhaps the real departure from this cold world for him was not too far away anyway. Nobody would want him, nobody would care for him, and so, back he went. (The U.S. admits 150 refugees from both Taiwan (Formosa) and Hong Kong per year. 150 from 130,000.)

It is not possible to go into detail here, but I hope that this may help our fellow students here to have a more accurate interpretation of the world news today. And, should it be possible, let more people besides the students here know some solid facts.

Just One Value

Dear Editor:
Since the elections of members of Student Council are over, I wish to ask just one question: What good and what value is Student Council?

In the short time I've been here, it seems all the Student Council does is give the Daily Nebraskan a little writing space. They really decide little and make few decisions of vast importance. It is my belief that the University could run much the same as it has in the past without a Student Council and all this hub bub of having to vote to save the integrity of a dead organization is a bunch of hoey.

Please, just give me one value of Student Council.

Sincerely yours,
Bill Borne
P.S. I read your yellow sheet—Special Election Edition, it still doesn't answer the main question.

Dear Editor:
The surviving veterans of the Spanish-American War met in their 55th Annual Encampment, May 6th and 7th at the Soldiers and Sailors Home, Grand Island, Nebraska.

At the meeting of the Council of Administration, which included all the past Department Commanders of the organization, world affairs were discussed as they applied to the State of the Union, and condition affecting our peace and prosperity. It was the opinion of the group that we as the oldest patriotic organization should take a stand and express our opinions as to what should be done to combat the insidious enemies within our own citizenship.

We veterans agreed that it was fitting and proper for us to express our views on conditions which threaten our unity and status as a nation to the youths attending the University of Nebraska.

Therefore, as Department Adjutant of the United Spanish War Veterans, Department of Nebraska, I submit to you for publication two resolutions which were unanimously adopted.

I was also instructed if the Editor of the Daily Nebraskan refused to publish these resolutions as news, that I as Adjutant be authorized to buy space in your next edition for the publishing of these submitted resolutions to be printed in 8 pt. type and boxed label, paid for by the United Spanish War Veterans. This office will pay for this publication upon submission of a proper billing and proof of publication.

In conclusion, we Spanish-American War Veterans, feeling very deeply the current attitude of many youths attending the University, wish to warn them of the danger to our beloved country. Respectfully submitted, The United Spanish War Veterans (Dept. of Neb.) Charles M. Sutherland —ex. 97 U of N

CRAM COURSE NO. 5: SHAKESPEARE

Continuing our series of pre-final exam cram courses, today we take up the works of William Shakespeare (or "The Bard of Avon" as he is jocularly called).

First let us examine the persistent theory that Shakespeare (or "The Pearl of the Antilles" as he is affectionately referred to) is not the real author of his plays. Advocates of this theory insist that the plays are so full of classical allusions and learned references that they couldn't possibly have been written by the son of an illiterate country butcher.

To which I reply, "Faugh!" Was not the great Spinoza's father a humble woodcutter? Was not the immortal Isaac Newton's father a simple second baseman? (The elder Newton, incidentally, is one of history's truly pathetic figures. He was, by all accounts, the greatest second baseman of his time, but baseball, alas, had not yet been invented.) It used to break young Isaac's heart to see his father get up every morning, put on uniform, spikes, glove, and cap, and stand alertly behind second base, bent forward, eyes narrowed, waiting, waiting, waiting. That's all—waiting. Isaac loyally sat in the bleachers and yelled, "Good show, Dad!" and stuff like that, but every- one in town used to snigger and pelt the Newtons with overripe fruit—figs for the elder Newton, apples for the younger. Thus, as we all know, the famous occasion came about when Isaac Newton, struck in the head with an apple, leapt to his feet, shouted, "Europa!" and announced the third law of motion: "For every action there is an opposite and equal reaction!"

(How profoundly true these simple words are! Take, for example, Marlboro Cigarettes. Light one. That's the action. Now what is the reaction? Pleasure, delight, contentment, cheer, and comfort! And why such a happy reaction? Because you have started with a happy cigarette—a felicitous blend of jolly tobaccos, a good-natured filter, a rollicking flip-top box, a merry soft pack. As Newton often said, "You begin with better makin's, you end with better smokin's." Small wonder they called him "The Swedish Nightingale!"

But I digress. Back to Shakespeare (or "The Gem of the Ocean" as he was ribaldly appelted).

Shakespeare's most important play is, of course, Hamlet (or Macbeth, as it is sometimes called). This play tells in living color the story of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark, who one night sees a ghost upon the battlements. (Possibly it is a goat he sees: I have a first folio edition that is frankly not too legible.) Anyhow, Hamlet is so upset by seeing the ghost (or goat) that he stabs Polonius and Bare Bodkin. He is thereupon banished to a leather factory by the King, who cries, "Get thee to a tannery!" Thereupon Ophelia refuses her food until Laertes shouts, "Get thee to a beaery!" Ophelia is so miffed that she chases her little dog out of the room, crying, "Out, out damned Spot!" She is fined fifty shillings for swearing, but Portia, in an eloquent plea, gets the sentence commuted to life imprisonment. Thereupon King Lear and Queen Mab proclaim a festival—complete with amateur theatricals, kissing games, and a pie-eating contest. Everyone has a perfectly splendid time till Banquo's ghost (or goat) shows up. This so unnerves Richard III that he drowns his cousin, Butt Malmsey. This leads to a lively discussion during which everyone is killed. The little dog Spot returns to utter the immortal curtain lines:

Alack, the play foretold was sad and sobby,
But be of cheer—there's Marlboros in the lobby!

As the slings and arrows of outrageous finals loom closer, perchance the makers of Marlboro are not untoward to offer this friendly suggestion: Get thee to a library!
