

Welcome--The familiar chimes from the Mueller Tower on the University of Nebraska campus welcome summer session students.

Summer Nebraskan:

An Experiment in Depth and Quality

The staff of the Summer Nebraskan extends a welcome and asks you to participate in an experiment in journalism. For the third summer the Summer Nebraskan will have two major goals: 1. To keep you informed about your university and your special educational interests. This job—to inform the reader—must always be the major function of a newspaper. 2. To try to develop a depth approach for the campus newspaper. This approach can be found on only a few campuses, with perhaps the University of Nebraska campus leading the effort. You deserve to know what we mean by depth. It is, quite simply, reporting the whole story, accurately, in perspective, and in an interesting way. It is a return to the principles forgotten in some modern newspapers. It is an addition to those principles of better writing sometimes practiced today more in competition than in some newspapers. It is, as James Pope, former executive editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, put it, making the word "reporting" the noblest word in the English language. Others may scoff, but to the journalist that alone can be an almost complete code of ethics. We hope we inform you. We hope the Summer Nebraskan adds something to your summer session on the campus. And we hope that along the way you will feel you were a part of an important experiment in journalism. Editor: Ruthann Chubbuck Business Manager: Kay Casey

Hardin Tells Alumni NU Faces Critical Year

The University is facing a critical year in national competition for faculty and there is a need for a reaffirmation of Nebraska's desire to have a strong state university, Chancellor Clifford M. Hardin told a Cornhusker Alumni Round-Up audience Saturday night. "Apparently the recent staff resignations have had the effect of pointing up an old problem in a new and realistic light," he said. "But it should be said, also," he continued, "that sometimes staff resignations have the effect of distorting the perspective. "When a key staff member leaves there is action to report, news to spread. But when a dozen staff members turn down offers and elect to stay, much of the drama of their decisions is, unfortunately, lost. "I would like to emphasize—undramatic though it may be—that we have in the record a great many examples of those who are staying and who will continue to contribute to the further development of the University. "In many instances those who are staying on through the critical year ahead are demonstrating their confidence in Nebraska and in the continuing determination of Nebraska people to have a strong University to serve their sons and daughters and their communities. I am pleased to join with those who hold this view. "I think the recent record reflects the continuing desire (Continued on Page Three)

Welcome, Summer Students

Neb. Union Plans Busy Schedule

The word "boredom" can be dropped from the vocabularies of summer session students and faculty as the Nebraska Union has planned a wide program of summer entertainment. The summer schedule includes entertainers and lecturers, an all-campus square dance, movies, bridge lessons and tours in addition to the Union's regular facilities. The Nebraska Union Artist Series will begin with a piano concert by Dr. Thomas Fritz of the Nebraska Union Music Department. The concert, to be held at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Union Ballroom, will include sonatas by Haydn, Liszt, Gaspard de la Nuit and Maurice Ravel. Other programs in the Artist Series include the play Under Milk Wood, a Dylan Thomas production to be presented by the Kaleidoscope Company which has been touring the U.S. for the past three years, and the All-State chorus, which will present Lerner and Lowe in Concert. A guest faculty member from Kansas State University, Miss Jean Sloop, will direct the Summer Choral Concert. The Artists Series will close with the Summer Symphony Orchestra, directed by Arnold Schatz. Leon Lishner will be the guest soloist, singing a short opera, Music Master, by Cimarosa.

World Affairs Speakers World Affairs Preview program include a discussion of United States foreign policy by Chester Bowles, Frank Coffin and Robert Matteson, members of a Department of State briefing team. Other World Affairs speakers to visit the campus are the Honorable Jonathan Bingham, deputy to Adlai E. Stevenson, His Excellency Dr. Gonzalo Facio, ambassador of Costa Rica and Mr. W. K. Dzierzanowski, who will speak on "Russia and Her Satellites since Stalin." The Union will offer two film series this summer. The Film Classics will feature films from Russia, America and France on Thursdays at 7 p.m. in the Love Library Auditorium. Films in this series include "Ballad of a Soldier," "Cheaper by the Dozen," and "Gervaise."

Cinema '62 weekly entertainment offers American films Mondays at 6 and 8 p.m. in the Nebraska Union Auditorium. Forum Series New New this summer is the Forum Series. The first forum will be "Education in Latin America" by Delmer Holbrook, who was president of a junior college in Peru and

NU All-State Begins Today

The 27th annual All-State fine arts program in the areas of music, art, dramatics and journalism begins today for 410 high school students from 118 Nebraska towns.

The students will get a three-week glimpse of college life as they study with University staff members, attend faculty recitals and daily classes, and live in sorority houses or the men's dormitory.

The All-State program will also feature student performances in each of the four fields.

This year's All-State attendance has increased about 90 over last year's due to the addition of the art and journalism programs, according to John Moran, director. Students participating in these areas will exhibit their work in the Nebraska Union June 23.

is now studying for his doctor's degree here at the University.

Tours for the summer are to the State Hospital, Nebraska State Penitentiary, Hallam Atomic Energy Plant and the Lincoln Telephone and Telegraph Company. Interested persons should sign up in the Union Program Office.

Free bridge lessons for beginners and intermediates will be offered Tuesdays at 4 p.m. in the Nebraska Union Indian Suite. There will also be duplicate bridge every Monday at 4 p.m.

Information on any program is available at the Program Office in the Union.

Other Nebraska Union facilities include:

The cafeteria which will be open for lunches Monday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. and for dinners Monday through Friday from 5 to 6:30 p.m.

The Colonial dining room which will be open from 11:30 to 1 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The Music Room and Book Nook which will be open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m. daily except Sunday when it will be open from 2-10 p.m.

The Union games area which offers bowling, billiards, table tennis, small games, bridge, checkers, chess and scrabble. Instructors are available in all areas of the games department.

The Union services also include a barber shop and a lunchroom for commuters.

Enrollment Increases For 1962 Session

Summer enrollment is on the increase with an estimated 4,000 students enrolled for the 1962 Summer Session, according to Dr. Frank E. Sorenson, director of Summer Sessions.

About 1,400 regular University students have preregistered, topping last year's 1,100 preregistration figure, and the number may be as high as 1,500, Dr. Sorenson said.

He cited three reasons for the increased number of regular University students attending the summer session.

"There is a feeling of urgency on the part of the students to graduate," Dr. Sorenson said. This eagerness to graduate appears to be due largely to undergraduate students looking forward either to graduate work or to a fifth year of study, he explained.

A second reason, Dr. Sorenson said, is that a number of the colleges now require more than 125 hours to graduate. The increased requirements almost require a fifth year of work and cause the students to feel an urgency to speed up their education.

Some students continue their educations during the summer so they can be better qualified when they are called into the services, Dr. Sorenson said. "The people who get the breaks in the services now are those who are the best educated," he added.

In addition to regular University students, the summer enrollment includes recent high school graduates who are entering college for the first time, graduate students, and teachers and school administrators from the majority of Nebraska communities, who are working on graduate, advanced certificates, or advanced professional certificates.

I predict that this summer we may well have between 200 and 300 recent high school graduates here on campus," Dr. Sorenson said. The immediate enrollment of high school graduates into college is quite new and the University community itself has adopted a new policy of planning especially for these new graduates, he added.

High School Grads

"We can do a very good job in helping the high school graduates adjust to the campus. The summer session gives the graduate a chance to explore his interests to find which fields he might best go into in the fall, and by the time fall comes, he feels at home here and can get along much better," Dr. Sorenson said.

Through the summer education of Nebraska teachers and school administrators, the University has a better opportunity to contribute to Nebraska's welfare than is usually true, Dr. Sorenson said. He explained that many of the University's regular Teachers College graduates leave Nebraska, but "if we help Nebraska teachers improve their education in the summer, they go back to our Nebraska communities and Nebraska gets immediate compensation for their investment."

Secondary Education

In addition to providing post high school instruction, the summer sessions at the University are making provisions to enrich the educational background of secondary youth, Dr. Sorenson said. Prominent on the campus during June will be the

Dr. Frank E. Sorenson

1,097 high school students attending the All-State fine arts program and the Cornhusker Girls' and Boys' States for instruction in Nebraska government.

"The summer program at the University of Nebraska is becoming more and more a part of a year-round offering," Dr. Sorenson said. "We used to have school for nine months and then virtually close—now things are really buzzing in the summer."

"This is all for the good as far as Nebraska is concerned—we're making more and more use of our facilities," he said.

"We can't afford to sit alongside a lake and rest all summer. Society is requiring us to step up our educational offerings," he added.

"Time's awasting and competition is great for educated men and women. The University has to step up its offerings for students to make it easier for them to acquire a broader education—we have to keep the University rolling to assume its share of the social responsibility of our time," Dr. Sorenson said.

Dept. of State Will Brief on Foreign Policy

For the first time, the U.S. State Department will hold a foreign policy briefing at the University of Nebraska.

The briefing, to be held June 21, is to help acquaint the public with the State Department's policies and programs.

Chester Bowles, President Kennedy's special representative and adviser on African, Asian and Latin American affairs, will head the team. Other members are Frank M. Coffin, deputy administrator for program for the Agency for International Development, and Robert E. Matteson, member of the Disarmament Advisory Committee and the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

According to Dr. Frank E. Sorenson, director of the Summer Sessions at the University of Nebraska, "this briefing should be of interest to all Nebraska citizens regardless of party affiliation because of the prominence of the briefing team and the significance of the topics to be discussed."

In attendance at the morning session, to be held at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education, will be official delegates from all counties in Nebraska. The afternoon session, scheduled as the first Nebraska Union summer World Affairs Preview, is open to students, faculty and the public. It will be held in the Nebraska Union Ballroom.

After a welcome by Governor Frank B. Morrison at the 9-15 a.m. morning session, the Department of State briefing team will speak on "U.S. Foreign Policy Today." A question and answer period will follow each presentation.

At a noon luncheon, Chester Bowles will speak on "The Three Frontiers That Divide the Communist World from Our Own."

"New Concepts in U.S. Foreign Policy" will be discussed at the 2:30 p.m. open session in the Union Ballroom.

Chester Bowles Chester Bowles, 61, attended Choate School in Connecticut and received his B.S. degree from Yale University in 1924. Following graduation he worked briefly as a newspaper reporter. With former Senator William Benton, he founded an advertising firm in 1929, of which he was board chairman from 1936-41. Bowles has been Connecticut director of the Office of Price Administration, National Price Administrator, member of the War Production Board, international chairary, 1960, he became adviser on foreign policy to Senator Kennedy, and in the summer resigned his candidacy for reelection to the House to devote full time to the presidential campaign. Bowler was sworn in as Under Secretary of State in January, 1961, succeeding Douglas Dillon who resigned to accept an appointment as Secretary of the Treasury. Bowles was sworn in as special representative and adviser to the President on African, Asian and Latin American Affairs on December 12, 1961.

Frank M. Coffin

He is married and has five children. Frank M. Coffin, 43, graduated summa cum laude from Bates College in 1940 and from the Harvard Business School with distinction in 1943. He obtained a law degree from the Harvard Law School in 1947, graduating cum laude. Coffin served in the U.S. Navy Supply Corps from 1943-46 and was law clerk for the late John D. Clifford, federal judge for the district of Maine, from 1947-49. In addition to his private law practice in Lewiston, Maine, Coffin has served as president of Lewiston's Board of Education, Chamber of Commerce and Community Chest.

Coffin served as chairman of the Pre-Convention Platform Committee of the Democratic Party of Maine in 1953 and as chairman of the Democratic Party of Maine from 1954-56. He was elected Congressman from Maine in 1956 and 1958. He ran unsuccessfully for governor of Maine in 1960 and in 1961 was appointed by President Kennedy as Managing Director of the Development Loan Fund and as Deputy administrator of the Agency for International Development.

Coffin and his wife have four children.

Robert Matteson

Robert E. Matteson, 47, attended St. Paul Academy from 1927-33 and Carleton College from 1933-37. At Carleton, where he was president of the Student Association, he earned nine letters in football, baseball and hockey. From 1937-38 Matteson served a National Institute of Public Affairs Internship with a U.S. Senator and a Congressman. He received an M.A. degree from the Harvard Literary School in 1940 and passed orals for a Ph.D. in government. Matteson served in the U.S.

Army from 1943-46 and was and a Silver Star for the capture of Kaltenbrunner, chief of the Nazi Gestapo. He served as security officer and received a Combat Infantry Badge.

Matteson has been an instructor of political science at Carleton College, assistant to the president of the University of Pennsylvania and director of the Office of Research and Evaluation of the Foreign Operations Administration.

From 1953-58 Matteson served as director of the White House Disarmament Staff and member of the NSC Planning Board. He was deputy to the U.S. representative at the London disarmament talks in 1957.

A Central Intelligence Agency representative at the 1960 Paris Summit Conference, Matteson became CIA representative with the U.S. Disarmament Administration in 1961, director of its policy staff in 1962 and senior member of the Disarmament Advisory Staff of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency in 1962.

Matteson is married and has five children.

The Department of State briefing team will visit the campus as part of the Nebraska Union World Affairs Preview program.
