

YOUR RAG—

... 72 and Still Kickin'

Seventy-two years old and still growing!

The Daily Nebraskan, today, begins its 72nd year of consecutive publication and service to the University. The paper was begun as an official organ of the student body and voice of student opinion. Its responsibilities to the University community has grown and continues to grow today as the influx of students swells.

In 1962, as well as in 1890, the Nebraskan is your paper. The news columns are filled each day with the events and influences that effect you or that you cause to effect others. Its editorial columns are expressions of your opinions and the opinions of your fellow students and faculty. If not, you are obligated to inform us as your staff where we are wrong, what we overlooked and how your opinion differs from that expressed by the Nebraskan. For this reason, the door of the Nebraskan office is always open as are the columns and letters-to-the-editor to student and faculty contributions—your contributions.

This semester brings a new staff together to publish your Nebraskan daily. We pledge ourselves to make the Nebraskan interesting, informative, controversial and entertaining.

Making the big switch from the sports department is Dave Wohlforth, who only answers to the call of Bullet, as this semester's managing editor. Bullet is responsible for the physical appearance of the paper and must exercise a great deal of news judgment in each issue. Last year this very talented fellow was sports editor and before that was staff writer for two years.

Rapidly gaining control of the news desk is another very capable and talented Nebraskan veteran, Wendy Rogers, news editor. This girl will have the demanding task of seeing that all the news of student activities and interest is gathered daily. This means a daily canvassing of the campus from top to bottom, from administration to activity sub-committee. You can have confidence in this little lady and her crew of reporters.

Sports editor this semester is Rick Akin, another veteran of this paper and Nebraska sports coverage. His job will be to cover one of the most hopeful years of University sports.

Copy editors are Linda

Jensen, a veteran, and Rosemary (Pixie) Smallwood and Susan Rutter, both new to the staff but extremely capable in their jobs of editing stories and writing headlines.

Staff writers Karen Gullicks, Gary Lacey and Sue Hovik are all veterans. They will be assisted by junior staff writers Jim Morgan, Al Spore and Jim Moore. All are products of last semester's fine worker-training program. Covering the Ag campus will be Larry Wadell, another newcomer to the staff.

In the adjacent business office is tall, slim, John Zeilinger as business manager for the Nebraskan. His "legmen" this semester are Bill Gullicks, Bob Cunningham and Tom Fitchett.

In a lonely corner of the business office sits quietly the sole person responsible for the delivery of the Nebraskan and the mailing of subscriptions, our circulation manager, Jim Trester. His is a hard job and if you do not think so, try putting 5,000 copies of the Nebraskan in a Volkswagen.

That is your staff, this is your newspaper. Enjoy it. Read it. Contribute to it. Above all, take issue with it.

A University—What Is It?

"... the peculiar property of every university, properly so called, must always be found on the highest departments of intellectual culture. It is not, primarily, a society for the diffusion of useful knowledge, nor a common school system for the education of the masses, however important a supplementary part it may take in both of these directions. Its distinctive work is in the higher realms of thought, there building upon the highest attainments of the past to reach upward to still higher, and thus enlarge the boundaries of human knowledge by discovery of new truths and by new applications of the old. Not quantity but quality of work is the ultimate test of a university's success. To educate one man thoroughly, to carry him above this standard of his times, to make him one of those who stand first, leading, not following the world's movements, confers more honor than to graduate a thousand upon the usual dead level of moderate scholarship. Nay, in these respects a rightly considered, quality of results includes quantity, and one man educated to do first rate work weighs more and counts more than many who are only competent to deal in secondhand ideas and to follow the beaten tracks. One best is more than many good. The man who looks a little further than his contemporaries discovers a new continent. The man who thinks a little more profoundly invents the telegraph or reveals the laws of light. To train one such man, or to clear his way before him, adds more to the world's wealth, and gives a greater impetus to the world's civilization than numerical figures can compute.

"Therefore it is, that the University should be supplied with all the needful facilities for giving the best education to the few, as well as a good education to the many. The number may be small of those who are by nature capable of receiving the best gifts, but the best gifts should be kept ready, and no one, honestly seeking for them, should be turned away."

From the 1871 inaugural address of William Greenleaf Eliot, President of the Washington University Corporation, 1854-1887, Chancellor of Washington University, 1871-1887.

'Survival Biscuits'—

Where To Put Them Now

Last year when the simmering Berlin controversy was threatening to boil over into World War III, President Kennedy called for a national fallout shelter program.

The response was immediate and dramatic. All over the country do-it-yourselfers started digging holes in backyards and basements. The manufacturers of prefabricated home shelters suddenly found themselves with more orders than they could fill. And the office of Civil Defense, with congress-sional approval, launched an ambitious program intended to provide, by 1967, protection against radioactive fallout for millions of Americans.

But the new enthusiasm for civil defense cooled off as rapidly as the Berlin crisis did. The amateur excavators have put away their shovels, the prefabricated shelter business is back in the doldrums, and the other day the House Appropriations Committee pulled the rug from under the President's program by refusing a $568 million request for the first phase of the mass shelter construction program.

Which seems to bring up anew the question of what's to become of the $20 million worth of "survival biscuits," the nation's major cracker manufacturers are baking to stock the federal shelters which it now appears won't be built after all. That's a lot of biscuits, and congressmen do hate bureaucratic waste. Maybe they will end up in school lunch programs.

—The Oregonian

(Ed. Note: It seems that the University's and state's version of the survival biscuit, the "Nebraskan," may go down in popularity with the federal government. It was a top selling item last spring and early summer.)

Coloring Book

I am a college student ... color me ivy.
Notice my pipe. It looks good. It tastes awful ... color it prominent.
Notice my sunglasses. They keep the rain out of my eyes ... color them useful.
These are my parents. They pay for my education ... color them poor.
They thought college could make me a better man ... color them disillusioned.
This is my cigarette pack. Everybody borrows it ... color it empty.
This is my advisor. He sees that I get the right classes ... color him blind.
He is happy when I get good grades ... color him sad.
These are my tennis shoes. They are my status symbols. I am a big wheel ... color the toes out ... color the laces broken ... color one lost under my bed.

Nazi Predicts 'Iron Curtain' In 1945 Book

Who coined the phrase "Iron Curtain?"

According to the Iowa State Daily, you are wrong if you guessed Winston Churchill, who used the term in his speech at Fulton, Mo., in March, 1946.

According to William R. Underhill, ISC speech professor, Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi propaganda minister, wrote in a German editorial in 1945 about an "Iron Curtain." Titled "The year 2,000," the book said an "Iron Curtain" would fall over eastern Europe if Russia were not defeated in the war.

do you remember?

Do you remember the first time you listened to a sea shell? And when you watched a sunflower turn toward the sun? And when you tried to guess where the pot of gold was at the end of the rainbow? Life is full of sweet mysteries for the young. Do you remember?

In fact, life reveals even more sweet mysteries as we grow older. When we think of these things, the mysteries of life, of God's care of us, of the wonders of the universe—you know, that's a way of praying! Yes, just thinking about God.

Fortunately, too, we have the Church—your church—a place to contemplate such things, to pray, to ask questions, and give thanks to Almighty God. Go to the church of your choice this Sunday. There you will find some of the answers... to some of these wondrous mysteries.
