

—Angels Take Flight—

First Instructions Given Residences

The Angel Flight soared skyward Tuesday night as representatives from each organized women's residence met in the Student Union for initial briefing.

A relatively new national collegiate organization, Angel Flight is already successfully established on 69 campuses throughout the United States.

Affiliated with the United States Air Force, and particularly with Arnold Air Society, Angel Flight on the NU campus will be mainly a social organization, concentrating on aid in the preparation and planning of various military events, serving other campus activities, and in taking part in tours and conferences held throughout the United States.

The first group of Nebraska's flight will be selected next week on the basis of two short interviews. One interview will be with the charter members of the Flight: Ruthie Reed, Judi Zadina, Leah Smith and Sally Dale. The final interview will be with a board of Arnold Air Society members. Each interviewing board will also include an advisor to the organization.

All women's residences will be allowed three applications for membership and members will be chosen on their interest, personality, personal appearance, and their knowledge of current world affairs. Each applicant must be carrying 12 credit hours, and an overall grade average of 6.0 must be held by sophomores, and 5.5 by juniors and seniors. Freshmen will not be eligible for membership. However, they will be able to serve as workers on the various flight activities.

Applications must be turned into the Alpha Omicron Pi or to the Beta Phi house by 9 a.m. Tuesday, Sept. 25.

Houses will be notified as to the interviewing dates, and the Daily Nebraskan will carry the individual interviewing times.

Chatfield Will Change Freshmen Schedules

Freshman students who find themselves registered for too few hours than they intended should get in touch with Lee Chatfield, director of the Junior Division, Administration 205.

In extending this invitation, Chatfield explained that the rush of undergraduate registration is now over and some adjustments may now be possible for Junior Division students whose programs are unbalanced.

NU Theater Begins Sale For Season

Dramas, comedies, operas and musicals are in store for University theater goes this season.

Season tickets are on sale in the business office of University Theater for $5. Five plays are on tap beginning Oct. 24.

The plays include: "The Three Penny Opera," by Bertolt Brecht, which is his version of Gay's "The Beggars Opera." The department of music will join forces with the theater for this production.

"The Visit," by Friedrich Duerrenmatt is a satirical approach to social life. Richard Watts Jr. of the New York Post says, "The Visit is an absorbingly sardonic contemplation of a community's aversion, and it is surely one of the most savage dramatic studies of greed..."

"Street Scene," an opera by Kurt Weill has been called "a perfect marriage of theater, music and poetry."

"Squirk," by William Walden won the University's Ballard Playwriting Contest last year. The play is centered around a young advertising executive who is plunged into situations where black is white, nothing has sharp edges and his basic beliefs are shaken.

The theater's annual Shakespeare play is "Much Ado About Nothing" — a comedy of wit and manners which gave the world one of its most famous love duels.

Theater officials also remind students, as well as Lincoln residents, of the Laboratory and experimental theater programs which are free. These plays are directed by speech majors at the University.

Pointing and Viewing

doubts were allayed by the adoption of the 15th Amendment to the Constitution. It provides:

"The right of citizens of the United States to vote shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any State on account of race, color, or previous condition of servitude."

So far, the American Negro—mostly likely the descendant of those very slaves freed nearly 100 years ago—is still not a first-class citizen.

He can vote—in some places, to be sure. He can eat at any lunch counter and sit where he pleases on buses, trains and airplanes—in some places. He is even able to go to formerly all-white schools—in some places, both North and South.

He is on his way toward full equality, but it is still a long ways away. Part of that way is blocked by housing discrimination. You scoff? Look around you. Lincoln has (in practice, if not theory) at least two distinct Negro ghettos.

To break the pattern, through the legal and moral force of the federal government, Kennedy promised to use his pen. So far he has not.

Roy Wilkins wishes the President would take pen in hand. The executive secretary of the NAACP concedes, according to Newsweek, that the administration "has proceeded well so far in virtually every other area of civil rights, but he added: 'He (the President) has got himself into a jam on this one (discrimination in housing). He made a clear-cut statement during the campaign; he said the President should and could extend equal opportunity to federally aided housing by the stroke of a pen. His failure to act stands out like a sore thumb. The natural is: Where the hell is the pen?'"

Wilkins has a point. This Saturday will bear watching. The President may end his procrastination and advance equality one more step.

North Platte Station Hosts Annual Fall Feeders Day

The 33rd annual Fall Feeders Day, hosted by the University's North Platte Experiment Station, will be held here Sept. 27.

The program will begin at 10:30 a.m. with a tour of cattle being used in various studies, according to Supt. James C. Adams.

The afternoon program begins at 1:15 with a report of results in dairy cattle studies by Dr. Mogens M. Plum, member of the Department of Dairy Husbandry at the University.

Dr. John Valentine, new University Extension Range management specialist at the station, will discuss "Range Management and Its Relationship to the Livestock Industry."

Dr. Robert Koch, chairman of the Department of Animal Husbandry will outline "Nebraska's Livestock Future."

The program will conclude with a talk by Dr. Marvel Baker, who just returned from a two-year assignment with the University's Turkish program. His topic will be: "The Tools of Progress and Their Use." There also will be a question and answer period at the end of the program.

Emerson College Opens With Emphasis on Man

England, today will witness the opening of a two-year graduate school named Emerson College.

The aim of the college is to bring to mature students, who have already specialized in diverse fields, a unifying concept and experience of man.

Located in Worchestershire, the college was founded by nine Englishmen but named after American thinker Ralph Waldo Emerson. The founders propose to counterbalance one-sided specialization by Emerson College in studies focused on man, in the belief that in man alone all diversities of human knowledge find their common center and source.

In the first year the curriculum includes basic studies on the nature of thinking, on history as an expression of evolving consciousness, and on man as the determining factor in evolution.

Practice in the arts is fundamental to the curriculum. For the benefit of students who can spend only one year at Emerson College, the first-year course is planned as a self-contained unit.

After having gained a new approach to the human being both in his totality and manifoldness, the student who continues at Emerson College will have an opportunity to do practical work in a branch of study or field of activity in which he seeks training.

The college has four schools: formal programs in education, the science and art of color, nutrition, and crafts.

If a student has interests beyond the scope of the schools, the college will arrange for him a program of study at other training centers in England.

At the conclusion of the two-year course, Emerson

College will assist students in finding employment in 17 countries of the western world.

A catalogue of Emerson College may be obtained from the Corresponding Secretary for North American, F. Blanche Rosse, 320 West 56th Street, Apt. 3A, New York 19, New York.

Dr. Gallaher Joins Staff

Dr. Art Gallaher, Jr., a social anthropologist, joined the University's staff this year. The associate professor will teach community and social anthropology.

The 37-year-old native Oklahoman, a member of the University of Houston faculty since 1956, has had considerable research experience.

In 1950 and 1951, he assisted with an ethnological survey of the Seminole Freedmen in Oklahoma, with special emphasis on resistance to ethnic assimilation and identification.

Dr. Gallaher was a field assistant for an Ethnic Health Survey Project to the Pima and Apache Reservations in Arizona in 1953.

He also studied the role of personal contact in the development of ethnic attitudes by an ex-Illinois resident living in Tucson, Arizona, in 1954. In 1957 he studied the cultural and social changes in a rural village in the Ozarks.

Last year, he was a coordinator for the Southern Regional Council, Inc., a project surveying occupational opportunities for Negroes in four Southern communities.
