Candidates Agree To NU Discussion

Gov. Frank Morrison and Fred Seaton, GOP gubernatorial hopeful, have consented to a debate and question and answer period at the University Oct. 29.

The time has tentatively been set for 4 p.m. in the Student Union.

The Morrison-Seaton discussion will follow rules agreed to by their campaign managers.

The six ground rules are: the candidates will flip a coin at the beginning of the discussion to determine who will speak first. Each candidate will speak on two pre-submitted questions and a third question, "What are other major issues in the campaign?" for fifteen minutes.

Questions from the floor may be offered in writing to the discussion moderator, who will screen them for propriety.

During the question-answer period, the candidate to whom the question is addressed will be allowed 3 minutes to speak and the other candidate will be given 1 minute to reply.

Each candidate will have a 5 minute period in which to conclude his remarks and will speak in the opposite order in which he opened at the beginning of the discussion.

Questions for the candidates to speak on during the first round of debate can be submitted to the Student Council office, 339 Student Union, or the Daily Nebraskan office, 51 Student Union by Oct. 22.

Kenton's Band Selected

Orchestra Will Play At Homecoming Dance

The bright, big sound of Stan Kenton's new Modern Music orchestra will head the list of Homecoming excitement, Nov. 3.

The 22-piece orchestra, centered around a score of modern jazz, will provide music for the Cornhuskers Homecoming Dance.

The orchestra, premiering in Las Vegas last April, is built around four new instruments called Mellophoniums. These instruments were designed especially for Kenton by the Conn Instrument Company and resemble a French horn.

The orchestra features Jean Turner, nationally known jazz singer, as soloist.

Kenton's list of musical achievements is long and impressive. During 1953 and 1956 he conducted his Standing-Room-Only tour of Europe. While in Europe during the 1956 tour, Kenton wrote the ballet music for the wedding of Grace Kelly and Prince Ranier.

Upon the orchestra's return to the United States, Kenton was the third member to be elected to the Jazz Hall of Fame. Jan. 5 of this year, he was awarded the Playboy Magazine Jazz Poll winner for the fifth consecutive year.

During the summer of 1959, he established the Kenton Workshop Clinics for teenage musicians at Indiana University. This past summer, he also headed two more clinics at Michigan State University and Southern Methodist University.

Dave Smith, chairman of the Homecoming Dance committee for Corn Cobs, said, "This is the first time Kenton has played for a University Homecoming, and we're certainly proud to have him."

According to Smith, approximately 1800 students are expected to attend the dance, an increase of 400 from last year.

Tickets will go on sale this week for $3.50 per couple. The dance will be held in Pershing Auditorium from 9 p.m. to 1 a.m. Nov. 3.

Nye Arrest To Bring Court Case

Student Removed For Lack of Ticket

By GARY LACEY
Nebraskan Staff Writer

A 19-year old University student will appear in Municipal Court today to plea, following his arrest at the North Carolina State-Nebraska football game in Memorial Stadium Saturday.

According to Lincoln Police, Bob Nye was removed from the game for going through the gate without a ticket at halftime. Police said that Nye told them that he had left the ticket in his car and that he didn't need it.

Police said that Nye was taken to a head scout, at whom he reportedly cursed. He was then taken to police headquarters and booked at 3:47 p.m.

Contacted by the Daily Nebraskan, Nye said that he got a return ticket and left the game at halftime to go back to his fraternity house.

He said that when he returned to the stadium he was permitted to enter at the main gate, but a few steps later was stopped by a boy scout who told him that he needed both the return ticket and the student admission ticket which Nye had left at the fraternity house.

"Walked Past"

"I wasn't going to stand there and argue with an eleven-year-old scout, so I just walked past him and returned to my seat," Nye said.

He said that a short while later the scout came with a policeman and they told him that he would have to go talk to the head scout. Nye agreed to do so.

Instead of taking him to the head scout they took him down on the track to three other policemen — a lieutenant and two patrolmen, he reported. Nye said that the lieutenant told one of the patrolmen to "haul him in."

Jim Penney, a spectator, said the patrolman forced Nye's hand behind his back and repeatedly jabbed him in the ribs.

"No Reason"

"I was not resisting arrest, but only resisting because I was being taken in and manhandled for no reason," Nye said.

He said that they took him to police headquarters, booked him and threw him in the "drunk tank."

Nye said he was not allowed to see a lawyer until Sunday morning.

Peace Corps Officer Will Be Here

Dr. Richter has spent a considerable amount of time in south and southeast Asia while serving as a U.S. Marine officer, a member of the U.S. Information Agency, and also while he was working on his Ph. D.

He joined the Washington staff of the Peace Corps in July of 1962.

Alpha Phi Stricken—Twenty-Six Persons Suffer Food Poisoning

Contaminated mayonnaise and beef salad sandwiches sent 26 persons to the Student Health Center Thursday night with food poisoning, according to Dr. Kenneth D. Rose, chief of the laboratory for University Health Services.

Twenty-four members of Alpha Phi sorority, a busboy and a maid were admitted to Student Health for treatment, said Dr. Rose. By Friday noon all had been released.

"Two cases were fairly severe and the rest were moderate to mild in varying degrees," Dr. Rose explained.

"The cause we can pin down to beef salad sandwiches that contained contaminated mayonnaise," he said, pointing out that all but one who suffered food poisoning had eaten the beef salad sandwiches, and the exception had eaten a cheese sandwich made with the same mayonnaise.

Cultures of the contaminated food are now being processed to identify the causative organism, said the lab chief. "It is most likely caused by staphylococcus," he explained.

Dr. Rose added that "a certain element of improper refrigeration was involved."

Alpha Phi housemother Mrs. Mildred Nuss had no comment Sunday except that she was awaiting word from E. W. Simpson, Chief of the Environmental Health and Safety Division of the City and County Health Department.

Higher Education Cost—Nebraska's Taxes Low in Comparison

By TOM MCGINNIS
Nebraskan Staff Writer

The State of Nebraska is 25th nationally in per capita income and 50th nationally in per capita expenditures on state taxes.

The above fact was taken from information tabulated by Dr. Royce H. Knapp of the University. Dr. Knapp has been serving as consultant for the North Dakota Board of Regents this past year and prepared the facts to help them study financial problems of their state.

Nebraska spends $18 per citizen on state colleges and universities. The rates of neighboring states are: Colorado, $123; Kansas, $98; Minnesota, $110; Montana, $101; North Dakota, $97; South Dakota, $82; and Wyoming, $39. It is obvious that many of the near-by states spend close to twice as much per capita as Nebraska does on state colleges and universities.

Nebraska spends $65.91 per person for state tax. Rates for neighboring states are: Colorado, $123; Kansas, $98; Minnesota, $110; Montana, $101; North Dakota, $97; South Dakota, $82; and Wyoming, $39. The national average is about $105, which is $35 more than Nebraska.

Dr. Knapp drew two conclusions from the above facts. One is that in comparison with near-by states the cost of higher education to the average Nebraskan is remarkably low. The other is that citizens of this state have a far greater ability to pay for the needed improvements in higher education than do citizens of other states.

"The facts are clear evidence that higher education in Nebraska is operating very efficiently. However, many improvements are needed and the facts are also evidence that Nebraskans can afford them," stated Dr. Knapp.

Law Review Chooses Ten Writing Assistants

Eight hundred pages of copy is the problem faced annually by the staff of the University's Law Review.

Clay Yeutter, editor of this year's Review, will be assisted by ten candidates for the Law Review Board, in addition to the regular staff.

Each year, the scholastic leaders of the freshman law class are chosen as candidates to assist in writing case notes and comments on current law problems.

This year, the top 10 of the class who have been selected as candidates for the staff of the Review are: Richard Schmoker, Lincoln; Jeffrey Chevront, Lincoln; William Keuster, Norfolk; Merritt James, Lincoln; Bruce Grey, Omaha; Richard Nelson, Lincoln; Calvin Robinson, Broken Bow; William Peters, Bedford; Ronald Sutter, Liberty, and Marvin Keller, Elsmere.

These ten men will write two articles for the Review and on the basis of the quality of these articles, the staff will be chosen.

Yeutter pointed out that a publication comparable to the University's Law Review is found in almost every major law college in the United States.

2,000 Visitors See Ag Campus Mums

Some 2,000 persons flocked to the University Ag Campus Sunday to see the chrysanthemums on display near 37th and Holdrege streets, according to Hans Burchardt, University greenhouse foreman.

People from as far away as Wyoming have shown interest in the University's colorful display of these hardy flowers, Burchardt said.

"These mums were developed to take as much work as possible out of growing flowers," he said.
