

Shapiro Among Poets At National Poetry Meet

Karl Shapiro, Pulitzer-Prize winning poet and professor of English at the University, is one of thirty American poets who are reading their works at the first National Poetry Festival.

Attendance to the festival is by invitation only. While there, Shapiro will also appear on a panel of three to discuss "The Poet and the Public."

The event celebrates the 50th anniversary of Poetry Magazine, the oldest poetry magazine in America. It is under federal sponsorship.

Other poets who have been invited to participate are Robert Frost, Mark Van Doren, John Crowe Ransom, Randall Jarrell, Robert Penn Warren, Paul Engle, Louis Untermeyer, Allen Tate, Ogden Nash, Kenneth Rexroth and Oscar Williams.

The three-day festival ends today at the Library of Congress. Attendance in the audience is also by invitation only.

Prior to coming to the University, where he is also editor of the Prairie Schooner, Shapiro was editor of the Poetry Magazine for six years.

Beginners Debate In Kansas Meet

Four beginning debate teams participated in a beginners' tournament at Manhattan, Kan. last weekend.

University students in attendance were: Robert Cherny and Ken Melin, who recorded four wins; Bud Kimball and F. A. Gossett, who won two and lost two; Jeane Anderson and Judy Pearce, who won two and lost two; and Lynn Allen and William Wood who won one and lost three of their debates.

Each team competed in four rounds against beginning teams from other midwest schools. The coach for the beginning squad is Dr. John Petelle.

This weekend two women's teams from the University will debate at Emporia State Teachers' College in Kansas. Members of the teams are Suzie Moffitt and Judy Bruhm, and Linda Hillyer and Kathie Madsen.

Last evening two University teams held an exhibition debate for Concordia State Teachers College in Seward. Concordia is considering the establishment of a debate team.

The topic of this year's debates is "Resolved: That Non-Communist Nations Should Form an Economic Community."

Nebraska High School Journalists Will Convene in Early November

"How to Succeed in Journalism by Really Trying" is the theme of the 31st Annual Nebraska High School Press Association (NHSPA) convention to be held at the University Nov. 9-10.

Nearly 1,000 students from more than 45 Nebraska high schools attended the two-day convention and clinic last year.

Beginning that afternoon, sectional meetings in the fields of radio, television, newspapers, yearbooks and advertising will be held.

At the banquet that evening, the following awards will be presented: the Riddle Memorial Pin, KM-TV Yearbook Trophy, Hastings Tribune Yearbook Trophy, the Scottsbluff Star-Herald Yearbook Trophy, the Omaha World-Herald Newspaper plaques and the Psychiatric Institute Newspaper awards.

The Rev. Alan J. Pickering, pastor of the United Campus Christian Fellowship, will speak on "Halloween Isn't Over, Yet."

After sectional meetings Saturday morning, the convention will end with an awards luncheon during which the sweepstakes awards given by the Journal-Star Printing Co., will be presented.

Speakers at the convention will include professional journalists, instructors from state high schools, faculty members at the University school of journalism and other top men and women in their fields.

ENGINEERS—Can you intersect each of these circles using 3 straight lines, without retracing or removing your pencil from the paper?

ALL OUR PROBLEMS ARE NOT THIS SIMPLE

We say "our" advisedly. YOU have to decide which companies to see about your future job. At a time when you've already got more to do than you can reasonably handle, it would be helpful if making that job choice could be done for you by slide rule—or computer. If it's any consolation, WE are facing much the same problem—from the opposite side of the fence. We've got to make decisions about a lot of young Engineers like you—also without benefit of slide rule or computer. We must decide who would be of help to us in tackling assignments in today's technologies of the aerospace and electronics industries. You DO have one advantage we haven't—you probably know something about General Dynamics already. We'd like to even the score a bit by finding out more about you. A discussion might solve both our problems.

Our Representative will be on your campus shortly with information about positions in each of these divisions:
In CALIFORNIA—Convair and Astronautics Divisions in San Diego; Pomona Division in Pomona
In NEW YORK—Electronics and Telecommunication Divisions in Rochester
In TEXAS—Fort Worth Division in Fort Worth
Incidentally, our man will have the solution to the puzzle along, just in case you missed it. Why not make a date to see us at your Placement Office now?

INTERVIEWS AT NEBRASKA
FRIDAY, OCTOBER 26

This invitation is also open to candidates for advanced degrees in Engineering, Physics and Mathematics.
If you should miss us, you can get information on careers at any of General Dynamics Divisions by writing to Tracy Brooks.
