Research Limited—NU Rates Low Among Schools Enrolled in Federal Aid Program

The University is not one of the largest beneficiaries of the federal aid to higher education research and training programs according to a recently issued publication from the U.S. Office of Education. The bulletin lists the top 100 institutions of higher education which are receiving $1 million or more in federal funds for research and training purposes.

Nebraska is in the lower half of the group, the one whose fiscal 1960 federal input was between $1-$3.1 million. Oklahoma, Kansas and Kansas State are also in this group.

Iowa State, site of an important atomic energy research center, is one of 25 institutions which received between $5.8-$191 million from the federal government in fiscal 1960.

In the second quarter which received from $3.2-$5.7 million are Colorado, Missouri, and Oklahoma State. The University is almost totally supported by non-state funds. These amounted to $2.96 million in 1959-60; $3.97 million in 1960-61; and $4.6 million in 1961-62.

Federal funds account for approximately 90% of all research support at the University according to Graduate Dean Roy Holly. Public Health Service and the National Science Institute account for the biggest contracts.

KNUS To Emphasize Special Interest Shows

Increasing the amount of special interest programming is one of the new changes in the setup of KNUS campus radio station, according to Dr. M. S. Pierce, assistant professor of radio and television.

This will give variety to the present musical programming as well as serve the needs of the student audience explained Jim Robinson, graduate assistant in radio and television.

Special programming features already being broadcast are home football games and two broadcasts each week from the Student Union Crib.

Some of the new innovations include increased emphasis on remote broadcasts and short, taped or live interviews with campus leaders and faculty, according to Richard Mulsby, program director for KNUS.

The reorganization plans also include a possible enlarging of the scope of the closed circuit station. At present, KNUS may only be heard in the Women's Residence Halls, Selleck Quadrange, the Student Union, and some organized houses. By the end of the year, the station hopes to have additional transmitters in more organized houses to increase the range of the station.

Don Isherwood, general manager of KNUS stressed that although most of the staffers are from broadcasting classes in the speech department, students, with or without experience, may fill the openings now available.

High Schools Can Borrow Art Pieces

Quality art pieces are being introduced into Nebraska high schools on a loan basis from the University.

Norman Geske, director of the University Art Galleries, said three state high schools now display a work of art by a respected artist from the University collections.

The works and the schools displaying them are: "Avacados," by Andrew Dasburg, St. Johns Lutheran, Seward.

"Seated Girl," by Oskar Kokoschka, Crete High School.

"Blade," by Paul Brach, Lincoln Southeast High School. Geske said the schools have been allowed a long-term possession of the pictures.

"We will consider doing this for other schools as long as proper conditions are met for displaying and protecting the works, and full responsibility for safety, including the buying of insurance, is assumed," he said.

The director said the Galleries will probably enlarge the extension program when the new Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery is complete.

"It is important that youngsters see original works of art and have the opportunity to see them often if they are to be of the most value," Geske added.

ored to embrace and befriend all the races of the free world, no matter what their colour or creed.

This behavior on the part of the Mississippi students is all the more deplorable in that educated people have actively expressed a primitive racial intolerance. Education should breed justice and consciousness of human values, instead it would appear that these students of the South have been unable to suppress their inherent inbred bias. The University educated should have sufficient foresight to be social reformers, not advocates of a partisan policy which is the antithesis of democracy."
