HUNG UP—Today is the fourth annual Business Careers Conference. Classes in Business Administration have been dismissed so that students may attend. Dr. Randall Klemme will discuss Economic Development at a banquet tonight.

Another Student Suspended

By TOM MCGINNIS
Nebraska Staff Writer
One more University student has admitted his affiliation with Pi Xi and has been suspended from school for an indefinite period of time, according to G. Robert Ross, dean of Student Affairs.

The name of the most recently questioned Pi Xi will be released after authorization is given by a reliable source.
Three other University men were suspended last week after an investigation following their capture while stenciling the Pi Xi snake symbols around the campus Halloween night.

Two of the suspended Pi Xi members, Louis Burkel and John Nelson are members of Alpha Tau Omega fraternity. The third, James Yates, is a member of Delta Upsilon. Neither house has of yet taken action on the status of the members, but both intend to have meetings in the near future to decide the status of their fraternity membership.

According to Dean Ross, investigations are continuing and will continue for some time because of the number of students involved. He mentioned that several students have been called in for questioning and that many more will be questioned before investigations are complete.

He added that two or three important leads have been uncovered and that these are being looked into.

In 1961, 18 fraternities on campus issued public statements from their national officers on non-affiliation by the members of their chapters with any activity by a sub-rosa organization. Alpha Tau Omega was included.

In the current by-laws and rules of the University's Board of Regents it states (Chp. 3, sec. 7):

"Students found to be associated with organizations not approved by the Dean of the Division of Student Affairs to be associated with or a members of an organization which encourages or requires as a condition for membership the drinking of intoxicating liquor or the practice of immorality in any form may be dismissed from the University."

A local newspaper stated yesterday that the card shuffling which resulted in the cancellation of a halftime show at the Homecoming game was the result of a sub-rosa's work. Dean Ross stated that his office and Corn Cobs were investigating the matter.

Actions Supported

It is resolved that we, the members of the Mortar Board and Lambda Societies of the University of Nebraska, support the action taken by the Division of Student Affairs in removing members of the sub-rosa, subversive organization, Pi Xi fraternity from the campus. We feel that this group as well as others like it (i.e., Theta Nu Epsilon and Eho Delta) contribute nothing to the campus and in fact stand as a group of misdirected and immature students who fail to recognize their moral obligation to their university, fraternity and to themselves.

By entering into such organizations these individuals violate a solemn oath to their fraternity, well known and universally supported institutional regulations and the laws of our state and nation. Such people can in no way be tolerated and should be speedily removed from the university. We dedicate ourselves and our Societies to the elimination of such elements from our campus community.

Let it be understood that this resolution spells out our intention to be through in our selection of future Mortar Boards and Immortals so that we intend to consider no one who affiliates with such forbidden organizations.

Commandant Selections Announced

Nine girls have been selected as finalists for Honorary Commandant for this year's annual Military Ball Dec. 1.

The girls, selected last Sunday by a committee made up of the three branches of the University ROTC services, will represent the Army, Navy and Air Force.

Representing the Air Force in the election will be: Judy Birney, an Alpha Phi junior; Judy Keys, a junior and a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority; and Sally Larson, a Delta Gamma junior.

The Army's three candidates are: Marilyn Hand-schuh, a Kappa Alpha Theta senior; Nancy Jacobson, Alpha Omicron Pi senior; and Kaye Schurr, Pi Beta Phi junior.

Navy commandant finalists include: Jeanette Broz, Burr East Hall junior; Judy Pearce, Kappa Gamma junior; and Nancy Foreman, Chi Omega senior.

Union Plans Trip

By SUSAN SMITHBERGER
Nebraska Staff Writer
If you enjoyed your migration trip to Colorado in October, you may want to go back and see what Colorado's like in February.

The Union is sponsoring a ski trip to the Colorado mountains over semester break.

Two hundred students are expected to participate in a trip to Winter Park, Colo. The trip, sponsored by Union trips and tours committee, has grown from 30 in 1960 to 100 in 1961.

"Students are urged to sign up as soon as possible," said chairman Susie Pierce. "The first 200 to come will be the ones to go."

Signing up should be done in the main Union office. A down payment of $35 is necessary at this time. The balance, an additional $35 is due Jan. 9.

The $70 total cost is divided as follows: Insurance, $6.00; Lodging, $32.00; Transportation, $19.50; Equipment, $7.50; Chaperones, $5.00.

A raise of $10 over last year's cost is due to increased insurance and transportation costs and the installation of new ski lifts.

Besides free lessons for beginners and access to the ski slopes, students will also be able to go swimming, ice skating, tobogganing, and moonlight sleigh riding. Participants do not have to know how to ski in order to go. Beginners, intermediate and advanced skiers may take lessons.

Due to the increased number of students anticipated for this year, the skiers will be staying in four lodges instead of just the Yodel Inn as in the past. The four lodges are Yodel Inn, Idlewild Inn, Idlewild Lodge and Skitel Motel.

Full-time doctors will be available in case of emergency.

The train, leaving Lincoln at midnight Jan. 30, will have an empty lounge car used for dancing. There will also be four regular passenger cars for the Union-sponsored group.

A film of last year's trip will be shown Nov. 14. A short orientation meeting will be held at this time. A mass orientation and film showing basic skiing techniques will be held Dec. 19.

NU Student Is Fined $25

A University student was fined $25 and costs yesterday for pointing a gun out of a car window at a police officer.

Charged with assaulting officer Frank Valentine in a threatening manner, Kenneth A. Hilton first pleaded innocent. He changed his plea to guilty after talking with the bailiff about the time and cost involved.

Officer Valentine said that Hilton was in the back seat of a car driven by Lynn E. Bonge which was going the wrong way down "P" Street about midnight Monday. Hilton pointed the rifle at Valentine as their cars were passing each other, according to Valentine.

Judge Richard O. Johnson pointed out that, though the rifle was deactivated, "Officer Valentine had no way of knowing that his life wasn't in danger."

The gun was described by Officer Valentine as "an English made, deactivated, fully automatic rifle." Hilton said the weapon had "no trigger, no action, no nothing."

Applications Due For Coast Guard

Applications for the February class of the U.S. Coast Guard Officer Candidate School, Yorktown, Va., must be processed by Dec. 1.

Applicants must be 21 to 26 years old and possess a baccalaureate degree or expect to receive one before the beginning of the OCS classes.

Interested persons should contact the Second Coast Guard District, 1520 Market St., St. Louis 3, Mo.

J-Students Print Election Edition

A special two page election edition of the "Lincoln Free Press" was printed early this morning by the School of Journalism's advanced reporting, editing and photography classes.

Performing in an integrated news operation similar to that of a daily newspaper, two crews including 26 journalism students worked day and night shifts. Twenty news pages were also prepared but not published.

Nebraska newspapers, journalism students and students attending the Nebraska High School Press Association convention this weekend will receive copies of the election edition.

Mr. Keith Blackledge served as faculty adviser to the news operation.

Gubernatorial Candidates Spend Tense Hours on Election Day

talked to Morrison late in the morning concerning election figures they had been tabulating the past few weeks. They told him he should carry the Lincoln-Omaha area, but with fewer votes than in the last election.

Exon said, "You have shaken ten times as many hands in western Nebraska as Seaton has."

Lincoln Pleas
Exon said he knew that the rank and file Republicans in Lincoln have been pleased with the Governor and have no reason to change.

"Yeah, but because they are Republicans they will vote for Seaton," Morrison replied. The Governor was glad about the polls on the two Lincoln campuses which favor Seaton.

"I would never shed a tear if I got defeated. I don't particularly relish the thought of the daily routine of the Governor's office," Morrison said. "But I am amazed that college students follow the political glitter of Seaton."

Didn't Finish
"Seaton didn't think enough of college to finish himself and he didn't send any of his children to the University of Nebraska," Morrison said. Gov. Morrison left his office at the Capitol at 11:30 a.m. to attend a Rotary luncheon. After the Rotary luncheon, Morrison returned to his office.

He repeatedly expressed concern over his loss in the mock elections at the University of Nebraska and Nebraska Wesleyan University.

the Lincoln Journal's opposition, and the defecting state Democratic leaders.

"I don't see how I can win with all these odds against me," commented Morrison.

The same way (Senator Estes) Kefauver wins each election in Tennessee," Biff said. He didn't elaborate.

SEATON

By WENDY ROGERS
A tour of your newspaper, a visit to your ranch and a short look at your quarter horses, a water leak in your basement, mounting piles of telegrams and a lengthening list of calls and the tension, omnipotent, making you the loneliest man in the state... this is what it's like to be a gubernatorial candidate on election day.

The candidate usually begins election day by casting his vote, the one vote he can be sure of securing. Fred A. Seaton, Nebraska's Republican candidate for governor was no different. He cast his vote at the administration building at Hastings State Hospital on his way to the Hastings Tribune plant.

When he arrived at the paper he seemed to climb the double flight of stairs leading to his office a little slower than usual. "I'm just a little tired," he explained. "We were getting calls from friends and news people up until 2 a.m. this morning. But I feel fine."

Calls, Letters, Telegrams
He had a long list of calls waiting for him when he got to the office, and his dark-haired secretary, Mrs. LaVon Stuart, was busy answering telegrams and letters from supporters.

Seaton placed several calls to thank campaign helpers before he went back downstairs for a tour of the newspaper plant.

He had a first-name greeting for everyone and for the "Hi, Governor," called by a linotype operator, a quick grin and a cautious, "I hope that's right. Wait until tomorrow."

Moving upstairs to the news room, Seaton paused to glance over wire stories and ask an editor about his sick son.

Wesleyan Vote
He saw the story reporting Nebraska Wesleyan University's straw vote that went 261-49 in his favor and was obviously pleased. "That helps," he said.

He spent an hour in his office, working, then walked two blocks to a small restaurant for lunch, stopping to shake hands and exchange greetings with many along the way.

A quick stop at campaign headquarters after lunch found him fielding an unexpected request. A white-haired man asked Seaton if he still had a copy of a speech he had made in 1936 in Alfred M. Landon's political campaign. "That was one of the most tremendous speeches I've ever heard," he said. Seaton said he doubted he still had a copy, but promised to look.

Later in the afternoon his secretary, Mrs. Stuart, commented that this is the loneliest day of the year for a candidate. After getting a haircut, Seaton returned to the newspaper office and started placing more calls to thank supporters for help.

Conversations
A one-sided conversation went, "Hello... Well, I'm feeling pretty good... whatever the result I'm grateful for what you did, and that's been plenty."

While Seaton was placing calls a janitor burst up from downstairs with news that a water leak had sprung in the basement. In order to fix the leak he shut off all the water.

Soon after a Western Union telegram boy broke in the room with a jubilant, "Telegrams right and left," and dumped them on the desk top.

At one point in the afternoon Seaton remarked, "I have a lot of faith in the intelligence of Nebraskans. I don't know exactly why, but the more people we get to vote the better state we'll have. Voting is a wonderful thing for this state."

Hastings Tours
In the late afternoon the gubernatorial candidate took this reporter on a tour of Hastings College and to his ranch to watch his quarter horses romp.

He had a quiet dinner with his family and was back at the office by 7 p.m. Earlier in the day his son, Don, 21, commented, "He's pretty confident. He should walk all over Morrison, but it will really be close."

Seaton that night remarked on the campaign, "If you don't like people, you have no business in newspapering and certainly not in politics. Win, lose or draw I have gained a lot from the campaign and from the people I've met."

"The campaign was as effective as we knew how to make it. If not, we'll soon know," he added.

Douglas Support
Concerning Douglas County Seaton said he was "hopeful in carrying it" and that he'd had a lot of support from people "never before concerned."

"I expect to win," he said, "you don't go to a ball game to lose." He jokingly likened it to getting married, "After you say 'I do,' that's it!"

Then as the agonizing returns started to creep in he calmly got out some maps and statistics and began to chart the slow decisive trend.
