

'UNIVERSITY MEET GOVERNOR' ...

Budget Faces First Test

Later this week the University will go before Governor Frank Morrison to present its budget to him and explain its needs for the next two years. This will be the first test for the University's proposed budget request from the state's general fund of $36,991,987. This compares to an inadequate $28,096,000 which the University was given by the 1961 legislature.

When trying to speculate on the prospects of this year's budget process, it is hard not to draw on the events two years ago. In 1960, the University went before the same governor with a request of $30,701,893. At that time, Governor Morrison gave the University budget request complete support and backing. After the legislature was in session, he went before them in an unprecedented appearance to ask the legislators to give the University its total budget requests. They didn't, but what was important is that for the first time in the University's history a governor backed the budget completely without doing any paring and tried as hard as he could to see that the legislature did the same.

In a discussion with several representatives of the University's student body this fall, Governor Morrison explained his reasoning for his actions in 1960. He told us that he felt that the governor of the state does not know what the University's real needs are. The ones who know are the University's officials and chancellor, he said, so why should a governor dispute their opinion?

Thursday Chancellor Hardin and others will appear before the governor. It is hard to predict what his reactions will be to their explanations of the University's budget. Things most certainly have changed since the governor acted two years ago and even since he spoke to us concerning the budget. All state agencies have also turned in their budget requests — totaling more than the state could possibly supply from their appropriate general fund. The governor has said that all budgets will have to be reduced. We are sure that this will include the University's. However, we are suffering from malnutrition of funds from the last two years and it is hoped that the Governor's fine support and interest in the affairs of the University will continue.

Good luck to all concerned — this includes the state (officials and people) and the University (administration, faculty and students).

China Sheds Crocodile Tears

Peking's Aim Is Domination and Expropriation Final Victory Will Be Ours!

By Rajinder Kumar Maniktala

Since the unabashed Chinese aggression on our (India's) frontiers, the communist propaganda machinery has been wasting no time in shedding crocodile tears. Mao Tse-Tung once wrote: "The Chinese have experienced endless difficulties in their search for truth." If one listens to Peking propaganda or tried to pursue official Chinese words, one would think that "truth" still eludes Mao and his followers; or perhaps in Chinese jargon, words have lost all meaning — another blessing of communism which itself is built on falsehood.

What is a frontier? China would say that a frontier is where we want to be.

What is a traditional border? China claims it is where it is shown on their "official" maps which change as their armies move forward.

What is aggression? China would say that India's defense of their own country was aggression.

What is defense? China would say that her invasion of India was done in self-defense.

What is peaceful settlement? Submitting to China's aggression on terms offered by the expansionist imperialist government of Red China.

Nehru has said once again in the Indian Parliament that one of the greatest difficulties in dealing with the Chinese government is that their words change meaning with morbid consistency and that China's frontier army is so mobile that nobody can keep pace with them.

For six years China's so-called People's Government gave the Indian government to understand that there was no frontier problem; that there were only some minor differences. Then in 1956 China came out with a new "official" map which showed more than 30,000 square miles of Indian soil as Chinese territory. After China's armies crossed their own frontier line set up on the 1956 map, they came out with another map in 1960 showing a new frontier. The new line claimed some 50,000 square miles of Indian territory.

Now, not only have the Chinese crossed this frontier, called the MacMahon Line; but have pushed forward into areas which have not been under control of China anytime in the past ten thousand years — and they still claim to be on their own territory.

The meaning of all this is clear to everyone except the Chinese government. Aggressive China respects no international frontier. Her frontier agreements with countries like Burma and Nepal are a mere "eye wash." She has thrown her vast armies (about 16 divisions) into bloody combat with India on the Indian's soil because China hopes to be able to cow-down the biggest democratic country in Asia. If China succeeds, the rest of Asia will be an easy victim. This is a new communist menace which threatens not only India, but the whole of Asia. It is a menace of nineteenth century imperialism armed with twentieth century weapons of war. For such an arrogant, devilish and imperialistic ambition, peace is a deceptive word — co-existence, a cunning lullaby.

Co-existence means respect for the territorial integrity of another country. You cannot co-exist with expansionist imperialism of the worst kind — communism. If China cared for co-existence, she would not have gobbled up other people's land and mounted an invasion on a peaceful and friendly neighbor. Whatever China may say, her aim today is clear to the whole world — domination and expropriation. China's dream of only one world — "The Chinese World" — means they want to co-exist with vassals and subordinate.

China has repaid all the good the Indian people and leaders have done them with gross betrayal. The Red Chinese leaders in Peking have betrayed a friendship between the two countries which has been built up and has existed for more than 2,000 years.

Some might wonder why these two giants in Asia are fighting for an area of barren rocks three miles high. The answer to this would be that the fight is between two ideologies — and not a fight for some land on the border. Our fight is with communism which the invader wants to impose on us.

What Chinese aggressors fear is freedom, dignity, decency, and the people's love for freedom and their patriotism which will cause them to defend their independence. This we have seen in India and her people over the past four or five weeks.

In the words of our Prime Minister, "India will never agree to surrender to invasion and aggression, but will strengthen herself and prepare for final victory no matter how many reverses we have. The massive invasion of our frontier by the Chinese aggressor under the cover of propaganda of falsehood has left India with no alternative but to face the crisis with all her strength.

The spontaneous response to India's appeal for arms and this week's joint communique issued from New Delhi and Rawalpindi (capital of Pakistan) is a welcomed sign in our favor for final victory over China's aggression and communism.

The war that India fights today is Asia's war. It is a war to defend integrity of not only India but the whole of Asia and perhaps the whole free world!

The final victory will be ours!

Writer Compares Sub Rosas, Masons

To the Editor:

Sub rosas equal Masons?

Play the dandy new game and discover strange parallels. Just substitute "University of Nebraska" for "Western New York" and "sub rosa" for "mason" in the following excerpt from "The American Republic," a history 091 text book.

"... and anti-masonry took its place among the strange enthusiasms for which Western New York was noted."

"Masonry had been widely condemned for its secrecy (a 'horrid oath-binding system') and for its allegedly anti-democratic character and for many simple and innocent folk it now began to take on the color of a gigantic conspiracy against the common man. The fact that such a large proportion of established political leaders and judges were masons suggested that masonry constituted a kind of office-holding clique. Moreover, masonry was associated with liberal thought, and many found in it a threat to Christianity; others, excited by the rumor that alcohol was used with abandon in masonic ceremonies, embraced anti-masonry almost as a temperance crusade."

Sincerely yours,
James K. Taylor

How To CARE

Every contributor to CARE's Food Crusade gets a receipt that shows the countries whose people will be helped.

At retail prices, $7 worth of food reaches destitute families in Colombia in typical $1 Food Crusade packages subscribed through CARE, New York 16, N.Y. Contents include 10 lbs. corn meal, 9 lbs. milk powder (makes 36 qts.), 3 lbs. shortening, 5 lbs. macaroni.
