New Designs To Be Shown

The designs for the reconstruction and redevelopment of the Beatrice State Home, as conceived in the minds of University architectural students, will be presented publicly this week.

Twenty-seven senior design students will appear before public juries and show their yearly project tomorrow and Friday and the following Monday through Wednesday at the Nebraska State Education Association building in Lincoln.

Each year the seniors, under the direction of their professor, Patrick Horstbrugh, are given the task of planning, in depth, the construction or renewal of major public facilities as if they were hired to do the job. Projects of the past have included new concepts and facilities for recreation, tourism and rehabilitation.

More than 400 invitations have been sent to educators, state senators, health and civil authorities and architects. The general public is also invited.

Each student, in turn, will present his ideas and plans for the redevelopment of the Beatrice State Home based on several months of work and research. The first judging will begin at 1 p.m. Wednesday.

Clark, Beatty Place in Contest

Cloyd Clark, a senior majoring in journalism, won a $750 fellowship as a first place award in the William Randolph Hearst sports writing contest in November.

His story, which appeared in the Daily Nebraskan, concerned Red Grange and his flunking of freshman rhetoric at the University of Illinois.

Norm Beatty won seventh place in the contest, and a $100 fellowship.

Shop Monday and Thursday 9:30 a.m. to 9:00 p.m., Other Days to 5:30 p.m.
