

Hall Stresses Trust

By SUSAN STANLEY
Special to the Nebraskan

"This is a country built on a tradition of mutual trust. We're in a bad way if we can't trust our next-door-neighbors."

This is the way Gordon Hall sums up the dilemma caused by the rise of extreme right-wing groups in the United States.

"This trust sort of arrangement is the only kind that a society such as ours can have and remain free."

"The loyalty of our presidents is beyond dispute," Hall continued.

"Sneers, character assassination and the scattering of irresponsible charges have no place in this nation. They create distrust, division, suspicion among loyal Americans — which is, incidentally, just what the Communists want."

"The real conservatives — the ones with a sense of responsibility and history—are going to be hurt by Robert Welch and his band."

"People will begin to feel that conservatives are irresponsible."

"In our country, liberal and conservative traditions are the only important ones," Hall asserted.

"The liberal tradition, he said, is one which holds that men are perfectable. "It is a tradition of reform, although within the framework of the Bill of Rights."

The conservative tradition, he feels, although it is a more pessimistic one, is not reactionary. It tends to move more slowly, and also works within the framework of the Bill of Rights.

On the extreme right, there is a so-called "conservatism" which is neither legitimate nor constructive.

A prime example of this, according to Hall, is the John Birch Society. Such extremists as the Birchers are great "system-lovers."

"They passionately adore our system, but they don't know a thing about it!"

Such emotionalism, masking as conservatism, Hall asserted, is far from being related to an understanding of the structure of our government.

A situation is created where Robert Welch is called upon to "represent" the conservatives and Norman Thomas, the liberal tradition.

"The extremes don't represent conservatism or liberalism," Hall stressed.

"We must not panic," he believes.

"One of the great calculated risks that our system takes is in tolerating such groups, in allowing them to exist."

There is an insistence by the John Birch Society on a "conspiracy view of history," Hall said.

These include conspiracies of the Roman Catholics, Jews and Communists.

As a matter of fact, George Lincoln Rockwell, head of the American Nazi Party, recently informed students at Carleton College that the homosexuals have a conspiracy to take over, with Dean Acheson at their helm.

"I don't like to use terms like 'challenge' or 'threat,'" Hall said. But, he pointed out, there is a very definite one in the United States, where he feels there is developing "a kind of conformity in blandness."

In an interview Saturday, he discussed the American college campus.

"To me, college is the only place where a unified idealism can be found," said the man who terminated his own schooling at 15.

"But this idealism needs to be harnessed and channeled." Under the present circumstances of apathy, it can't be properly harnessed."

He blames the laziness of many college professors for the maintenance of this apathetic attitude of students.

In his lecture tours, he has encountered heads of political science departments who said they had "never thought about politics in terms of left, right and center movements." "I've met college graduates who can't even think. I can't imagine why anybody would want to lead an unexamined life."

POLITICAL EXTREMES OUTLINED—Gordon Hall told the audience at the Unitarian Church last night the activities and types of extremist movements on both the right and left of the political spectrum.

Students May Interview For Midwest Model UN

By SUE HOVIK
Nebraskan Staff Writer

All University students, not just Student Council members, are eligible to interview for the Nebraska delegation to the Midwest Model United Nations (MMUN), explained Denny Christie, campus MMUN chairman.

The sessions will meet in St. Louis, Mo., from Mar. 27 to Mar. 30.

He added that this is the first year that a budget of $100 has been allowed for the delegation of five students. He said that this should cover the majority of the costs.

Christie emphasized that the student delegates who attend the MMUN must be able to state the position actually held by Algeria on one or more major world issues.

He added that they must also understand the views held by other countries on these issues and be ready to defend and modify his position in public debate.

The Five Main Committees and Security Council will meet on the mornings of Mar. 28 and 29. They will discuss and act upon the various resolutions introduced by the members, said Christie.

These resolutions are amendable and if passed will be discussed by the Model General Assembly. Each member is represented by one delegate in each of the Main Committees.

Christie explained that Nebraska will not be on the Model Security Council because it is not presently on the United Nations Security Council.

Applications, available in the Council office, are due Feb. 8 and interviews will be the afternoon of Feb. 9 in the Student Union. Christie said that interview questions would concern world events, the United Nations and Algeria.

The interviewing board will consist of a Council member, a political science professor, and possibly one of the Council advisors and two past delegates to the MMUN.

J-Schoolers Are Given Unique Test

Participation in the publication of sections of the Lincoln Star and Journal Sunday editions completes a unique field trip — a final examination for 26 University students in the school of journalism.

The student assistance was a test of skills learned in the classroom by members of the editing, advanced reporting and news photography classes.

While student teams have participated in editorial production of all but two of Nebraska's 19 outstate dailies in previous years, this is the first time they had worked on a Sunday edition.

The field trip is the culmination of the semester's activities in the three courses. The initial six weeks of the semester are reserved for classroom instruction with the three classes meeting separately.

After this the three groups are combined to form an integrated newspaper operation as the students simulate production of a newspaper.

Dr. William E. Hall, director of the school of journalism, said, "These field trips provide final examinations for advanced news-editorial students that cannot be duplicated in the classroom."

"Much of the recent success of the school of journalism may be attributed to the cooperation of Nebraska newspaper publishers who have placed their facilities at our disposal and assisted in countless other ways," he said.

Peace Corps To Give Test

The Peace Corps placement test will be Jan. 26 at 8:30 a.m. at the Post Office in Lincoln.

Developing nations around the world are asking the Peace Corps for teachers, farmers, carpenters, nurses, engineers and Americans with many other skills, announced Richard A. Graham, acting associate director of the Peace Corps.

Volunteers must be American citizens who are at least 18 years old. Married couples are eligible if both qualify and have no dependents under 18.

The Peace Corps placement test is not competitive. Anyone with the equivalent of a high school education is eligible to take the test. There is no passing score. The test helps the Peace Corps determine the overseas assignment for which applicants are best qualified.

To qualify for the test, one must fill out a Peace Corps questionnaire and bring it to the test center. Questionnaires are available at the Post Office and from the Peace Corps, Washington 25, D.C.

Forums Presents Dinner

Governors Frank Morrison, Dwight Burney and Val Peterson will dine informally with thirty-five students Wednesday night.

The program, "Dinner with the Governors" is being sponsored by the Union forums committee in an attempt to stimulate student interest and awareness of state problems.

Angel Flight Picks NU As Area Headquarters

The University was selected as Area F-2 Headquarters of Angel Flight for the next two years Saturday at the annual area conclave at South Dakota State College, Brookings, South Dakota. Karen Gunlicks was elected Area Commander.

Area F-2 is composed of Iowa State University, University of Iowa, University of Wisconsin, Drake University, Omaha University and the University of Nebraska.

Delegates to the conclave were Miss Gunlicks and Roberta Hine, members of Angel Flight; Terry Miller and Gary Thrasher, members of Arnold Air Society and Captain Norm Leas, advisor to both squadrons and professor of Air Science.

Miss Gunlicks will now attend the national conclave in Buffalo, New York this May. She will also be in charge of the area conclave, to be held at the Miss Gunlicks University, next October. The area officers, who will be selected from the University Angel Flight by Miss Gunlicks, will make visitations to each of the area members during the next year.

Drake University also submitted a bid for Area Headquarters.

Miss Gunlicks, a member of Kappa Alpha Theta, was Information Officer of the University Flight until her election. She is also a member of People-to-People and a Daily Nebraskan staff writer. Majoring in political science, she plans to go into international relations.

"Although we are a new flight, we hope that through our area position, we can bring the area closer together," commented Miss Gunlicks.

Angel Flight was organized on this campus last spring. It is the auxiliary to Arnold Air Society, Air Force honorary.

"It is really tremendous considering Nebraska Angel Flight is a four month organization, said Ruthanne Read, University Commander of Angel Flight. Since it is brand new, it's certainly a stepping stone to national headquarters, she added.

NIA Collects Books For Libraries, Schools

By SUE HOVIK
Nebraskan Staff Writer

In Yemen the community school teacher's wife who acted as librarian told a little boy that he must return a book that was long overdue.

The little boy pulled the book out of his pocket along with a notebook in which he had painstakingly recopied every word. He told the librarian, "Now I will always have a book of my own to read."

This is typical of many examples given in requests sent to the Nebraska International Association (NIA) for books for schools and libraries, said Jack Ward, book project co-chairman.

NIA collects from University sources, University professors, book stores, student donations and private donations.

Ward said that Chief Justice Robert G. Simmons got 3,000 books from the school district for the project.

Some of the subjects covered in the books are reading, German, English literature, biology, zoology, sociology, political science, law, advertising, scouting and foods.

Other teaching aids requested include magazines, maps, charts, math books which use British pounds and storybooks.

Books are sent to Ceylon, East Africa, Philippines, Marshall Islands, India, Indonesia, Ethiopia, Nigeria, Korea, Ghana and Sudan.

Ward said that the project gets more requests than they can fill. They are presently getting a shipment ready for two colleges in Iran.

Ward said that right now NIA has 600 books packed and ready to ship, but they have funds to ship only about 200 of them.

NIA is also preparing to ship 2000 books to San Francisco, Calif. to the Asian Fund which they will then ship them to Asia and handle the cost.

In the basement of the building at 1610 "R" Street, there are 3,000 books which haven't been sorted yet, said Ward. He added that NIA would like student assistance on Sunday afternoons for a couple of hours to help sort, type letters and write publicity releases.

DuPont Awards Science Grants

The University, along with 167 other colleges and universities in the nation, will receive grants under the DuPont Company's program of aid to education.

DuPont awards to all the schools total $1,780,000. The program is for strengthening the teaching of science and related subjects, for fundamental research by universities and for facilities for education or research in science and engineering.

Two grants will go to the chemistry department. One includes a stipend of $1,200 and payment of tuition and fees to a graduate student teaching assistant, and $500 to the department. The second is a $5,000 grant for fundamental research.

The chemical engineering department will receive $1,800 to assist one of its faculty members by supporting summer research.
