

Researchers Seek Solution To Potato Blight Problem

A cure for a new headache afflicting Nebraska's farmers is being sought by University researchers. The farmer's problem is late blight of potato.

It was this blight which caused the Irish potato famine in 1845 and resulted in thousands starving and other thousands fleeing to other countries. The blight has been a chronic problem in many areas of the world and the United States.

Nebraska potato farmers, however, had never been bothered until a sudden epidemic in 1951. The blight hit again in 1953, 1954, 1957 and 1958. Nebraskans had felt safe from the disease because they thought the area too dry, according to an article in the winter edition of the Nebraska Experiment Station Quarterly, published by the University College of Agriculture.

The article by J. L. Weining and R. B. O'Keefe, Extension plant pathologist and instructor in horticulture, respectively, describes how Experiment Station scientists determined the cause of the sudden outbreak and helped set up a system for keeping the blight under control.

The scientists discovered that the blight epidemic was sparked by the introduction of new varieties of potatoes into an area where a single variety had always been grown. New varieties kept the area in the blight-prone class.

Studies determined the susceptibility to the blight fungus of various varieties of Nebraska potatoes. A late blight forecasting system was set up to warn growers when temperature and humidity conditions are right for the blight. Thus warned, the growers can spray their crops against the fungus.

The potato varieties have been classified according to whether they have a high, moderate or low blight potential. Growers of the high rated varieties must have a regular spray program regardless of the warning system, because once the blight starts in these varieties spraying will not save them.

Those who grow moderate rated varieties can wait until conditions are right for the development of blight and then spray. Growers of low rated varieties need not spray until the blight fungus actually appears.

Essay Contest Is On Vivekananda

The Vedanta Society of St. Louis will award one hundred dollars to the writer of the best essay on the life and teaching of Swami Vivekananda.

Swami Vivekananda represented Hindu philosophy and laid the foundation of the Vedanta movement in America. Vedanta is the culmination of the religion and philosophy of the Vedas, the source of Hinduism.

Love Library has been presented with a volume on Swami Vivekananda's works.

The contest is open to all accredited college students in the United States. The essay must be three or four thousand words in length and must be submitted by Sept. 15, 1963. The essay should be sent to: Mrs. Virginia Ward, secretary, The Vivekananda Birth Centenary Committee, 205 South Skinner Blvd. St. Louis 5, Mo.

PTP Social Hour Has Films, Games

People to People (PTP) yesterday initiated its weekly social hour for foreign students.

In addition to documentary films from various countries, party games, chess, kareem, and informal discussions made up the agenda of the program.

Square dancing may be added if enough interest in the social hour is shown, according to a PTP report.

What's Inside?

WHAT MAGIC INGREDIENTS DO THESE BOTTLES CONTAIN? Do they hold harmful, injurious poisons? Or are they filled with healing medicines and vitamins? Will they inflict pain, or will they cure disease?

But what does it matter? If the contents are bad, we can pour them out.

But the minds of children are an entirely different matter. A small human being can be filled with selfishness and hate, or he can be filled with sincerity and love. Unfortunately, evil is more quickly dispelled from a glass bottle than from the soul of a child. For in the human mind bad thoughts can grow, and as time goes on, it is more difficult to replace them with truth and love.

That is why it is so important to instill within our children a sense of right and wrong at an early age. Of course, by example, "you" can be a tremendous influence. But you need the help of your church—the wisdom of Christ's teachings. With them, you can fill your heart with the essential ingredients for a happy and fruitful life.
