

NU Regents Appoint Two

Dr. Marvin Twiehaus, nationally-recognized animal pathologist at Kansas State University, has been named professor of veterinary science at the University. The appointment becomes effective July 1.

Twiehaus will fill a vacancy created when Dr. Huseyin Urman returned to Turkey. His appointment was announced at the Board of Regents meeting yesterday.

A native of Levasy, Mo., Dr. Twiehaus has served the past ten years as professor and head of the department of pathology in the School of Veterinary Medicine at Kansas State. He joined the K-State staff in 1937 as an instructor and was elevated to professor in 1949.

"The addition of Dr. Twiehaus to our staff will strengthen our team approach to the study of diseases which attack all kinds of meat-producing animals," said Dr. George Young, chairman of the Department of Veterinary Science.

Dr. Twiehaus has been elected to the American College of Veterinary Pathologists — an honor bestowed upon those who have made an outstanding contribution in the field of animal disease control and eradication.

The Board of Regents also appointed Jagdish Srivastava, a native of India, as visiting associate professor of mathematics for next year to replace Bernard Harris, who will be on leave.

In other action, the Regents approved the transfer of Dr. George Kelley, associate professor of veterinary science, to the department of zoology and physiology for next year to replace Prof. Harold Manner, who will be on leave.

A bid of $15,450 for the construction of one-story, concrete block addition to the tractor testing laboratory was approved.

The Regents accepted bids on furnishings for Cather and Pound Hall for beds and mattresses. They also approved a lease with Vanice Pontiac-Cadillac Inc., of Lincoln for rental of University property at northeast and northwest corner of 12th and Q streets. The monthly payment will be $1,450.

The Board also established two new scholarships for African students to enter as first-year students in September, 1963.
