Two Students Get Awards From Scrip

David Wiltse and Karen Kenney, University seniors, were announced as winners of the Scrip magazine Short Story and Poetry Contests, respectively.

Scrip, the University's undergraduate magazine, offered prizes of $25 in each of the two divisions.

Wiltse, an English major in the College of Arts and Sciences from Falls City, earned top place with his story "Cross-Fire." He has previously had his work appear in Scrip and in Speakeasy magazines. In 1962, he placed second in the Prairie Schooner Fiction Contest.

Miss Kenney is an elementary education major in Teachers College, and her prize-winning poem "Sympathy" will appear along with a group of her other poetry in the forthcoming Scrip.

A native of Lincoln, she has had her writing printed in the Denver Post, religious publications, and The Lincoln Star, where she is employed as a staff writer.

Dr. Robert Narveson, who this semester succeeded Dr. Robert Hough as faculty advisor to Scrip, said "We are very gratified for the enthusiastic response of the student body to the contest. In view of the excellence of the material received, we will probably try similar contests in the future."

Grossman To Give Illustrated Lecture

Dr. Betty Grossman, a noted archaeologist of the St. Louis Museum, will present an illustrated lecture on the Art and Archaeology of Mycenae at 8 p.m. tomorrow in the Love Library Auditorium.

Seventy-five years ago the German archaeologist Heinrich Schliemann announced the discovery of the so-called grave of Agamemnon, the mythical leader of the siege against Troy. Schliemann's discovery brought the attention of the world to Mycenae (1500-1200 B.C.) as one of the important sources of Greek civilization and as the probable spring of much of Greek legend.

Since 1952 Dr. Grossman has worked with George Mylonas, whose archaeological research has centered about the citadel of Mycenae. Dr. Mylonas' discoveries in Mycenae and the translations of Linear have done much to change parts of the Homeric myth to historic reality.

Dr. Grossman will be sponsored by the Departments of Art and Anthropology and the Nebraska Union Talks and Topics Committee.
