Ivy Day ends what the Activity Mart began inadvertently, 10 these three years ago.

There has naturally, or unnaturally, been some certain degree of speculation during this past week as to whom will be properly grass-stained and heavy-browed after the ensuing Ivy Day Sweepstakes. Needless to say, there will be a few on the inside and more likely a few on the outside saying, "Pinch me and see if I'm dreaming," and more needless to say, some of the mystics will outmystic themselves with their selections. Without a doubt, the whole day will be the greatest entertainment on the campus during the entire year, five week downs, no exception.

As probably one of the few outside of the noble organizations who would even have the gall to pretend to understand the vague intricacies of the mystic magic—or the old selection-rejection routine, it is imperative that m.s. describe the processes that the groups go through to choose their charming and oh-so-lucky successors. Suffice it to say as an introduction that the involvements of the system would be enough to tax the brain of the lowest Simian, and from all reports it has managed to do the same this year.

Vapid generalizations would be inconclusive, but obviously in order. Criteria is often relegated to the number of AWS point system appeals, deep ethical problems, (like what will the campus do to us if we don't take her on Ivy Day and put her in the court, or what will the campus do to us if we impale him on the Sigma Tau pyramid and tell him to forget it?), quiet introspection dealing with the weighty problems of whether the clairol has been used too freely, and naturally the question of image.

Image is all important. Those people whose image is not one of dressing like 10 to 12 other people... well there ain't no hope. People who possess a boy scout complex, and who are revolted by the idea of wearing a merit badge sash, or those who never managed to complete the requirements for the cub award, will naturally be excluded from the benighted bairic circle. However, inside sources indicate that experience hawking girl scout cooks may be helpful in getting the mighty mask.

People who don't know straight up and down from sideways will not be in innocents... they are being MORE selective this year, and besides that they wouldn't know if they were tackled. However, people not knowing straight up and down from sideways, their left foot from their right, a lemon from a bottle of paste, or a watermelon from a flat footed ant-eater, will not be restricted from Mortar Boards.

Anyone who refuses the first suggestion of the announcer to troop down to the lawn will be forgotten. This year the bondos have gotten the idea that there isn't gonna be a lot of this mickey mouse begging people to glide onto the grass, it will be entirely on the first come, first served basis, so get on your track shoes.

There is probably a small word of explanation necessary for the spookable. It is very hard for some of the troops this year and they will not look directly at the faces of those they are trying to give the stare scare. If you want to drive them crazy wiggle your ears, paste a Union doughnut on your forehead or wear a dunce with a pinwheel on the top of it. Don't be too obvious about trying to outspook the spooks, because this is their last chance to prove HOW BIG OF SPOOKS THEY REALLY ARE, and it would be a shame to deny them their ivy overgrown opportunity.

The highlight of the whole day is a really big deal. In the first place, the Phi Deltis are singing "The Animals are a Comin'." BUT in addition they have agreed to burst forth in glorious discord just as the Innocents and Mortar Boards forage forward onto the battlefield for the traditional ivy planting farce.

If all the ivy that they had ever planted had grown, the Fiji house would be much bigger. However the problem rests with buildings and grounds. The men, supervised by Argyle Anti-Ivy, who was a court page for 72 years, is trowel-bent-for-weeds to root up the plant and until he can get his name on the racing form he swears that there will be "no-of-the-no!"

There will be only one prediction made for the great and glorious day. It is the contention of this corner that after the great weekend is "fni," the whole campus will look like the aftermath of a scandal. And believe you me, you ignoramatic imbecile who has read this far, it will be just that if the University's favorite produce of yellow journalism hits the doorsteps.

Natch, by yellow journalism I mean the racing form!

(Too bad about yesterday's troops, but it was a couple of yuk yuks anyway.)
