

U.S. Evaluating 'Traditional' Policy

By WENDY ROGERS

The federal government as a whole is taking a hard look at its "traditional" foreign policies of the last decade, according to Robert Lincoln, Assistant Director of the United States Information Agency (USIA).

Lincoln spent Monday at the University informing students and professors about USIA operations and career opportunities for students.

Nebraska was the first stop in a week-long tour of five universities including: Iowa State University at Ames, University of Arkansas, University of Oklahoma and the University of Texas.

Eight other senior officers of the USIA are making similar trips to universities across the country during a three-week period.

According to Lincoln, U.S. foreign policies are being studied and re-evaluated on a regular basis with much attention to the hard facts of international relations and the objectives of the U.S. in any given area.

Evidence of this is seen in the general effort to get European allies to play a larger role in the free world's economic assistance program, he noted.

The same "hard look" and constant re-evaluation applies to USIA operations, said Lincoln.

"Our job is to explain and further U.S. policies through informational media and cultural activities in foreign countries around the world," he continued.

By Congressional legislation, the USIA (known overseas as the U.S. Information Service) is a separate government agency operating on an annual budget of $125,000,000.

The agency's director, Edward R. Murrow, makes direct reports of USIA operations to the president.

Now located in 102 countries around the globe, the agency seeks to make U.S.

national policies intelligible, and, "wherever possible, palatable."

To accomplish its purposes, the USIA employs radio, television, films, the press and publications, information centers, and personal contact through its officers overseas.

Under its auspices, the Voice of America broadcasts 761 hours weekly by short wave in 36 languages to a world-wide audience of millions.

Lincoln, a graduate of Yale University who entered the agency in May, 1955, noted that the Russians spend more money per year trying to jam the VOA than the agency spends in its entire annual budget.

In addition to VOA, the agency distributes program material in 62 languages to 3,000 stations overseas.

Via television, some 176 million people in 68 countries see some 500 filmed reports and features annually.

At least 10,000 words of commentaries, features and background stories are radio-teletyped daily to five world areas for distribution to local papers.

The agency maintains 182 libraries, 79 reading rooms, 159 Binational Centers, in 88 countries as part of their informational center program.

Some 1,250 field officers of the USIA work abroad with editors, educators, parliamentarians and other community leaders.

The agencies biggest problem, noted Lincoln, is "communicating with the communicators" — that is, influencing opinion leaders in countries around the world.

India is the setting for the largest USIA country program in the world, noted Lincoln. Delhi is the main post for the agency, with other larger posts located in Bombay, Calcutta, and Madras, and small posts in five other cities.

In India, as in all USIA-served countries, the program of operations is adapted to the political structure as well as such factors as the literacy level and availability of mass communication media.

"Our first problem in many countries is to convince people that the U.S. is a vital, constantly changing country which understands by its very nature the rapid changes in their countries," said Lincoln, who served in Syria and Ceylon before becoming deputy assistant director in 1962.

Now in charge of the Near East and South Asian program of the agency, Lincoln said Communist influence, which varies tremendously in the many countries, is a constant problem to the USIA.

Noting that Russian propaganda efforts are extremely active in much of the world, Lincoln explained that the term "capitalist" carries a connotation nurtured by the Communists in many areas which is more nearly like 19th century capitalism than what the U.S. has today.

Often the terms "imperialism" and "capitalism" are equated in the minds of people on all levels in foreign countries he said.

"One of our most basic problems is to explain what the U.S. economy really is, continued Lincoln.

But while the USIA continues its operations abroad, Lincoln noted that "the amount of information available to most Americans about foreign countries is much greater than in any other country in the world."

About 70 junior officers are now being taken into the foreign service career corps, said Lincoln. The annual examination for the corps is given on Sept. 7, and applications are due by July 22. More information for those interested is available at the University Occupational Placement office.

Budget Committee 'Plays It Deadpan' At Hearing—Hardin

By NORM BROWN

University of Nebraska Chancellor Clifford Hardin Legislative budget hearing committee and had no indication this morning that he appreciated the courtesy of the tion of their action on the $7.1 million dollars he asked for in the budget request.

During the six days of hearings, each of the deans of the University and other department heads presented their views on the needed increase of their respective budgets.

"We did very well four years ago, and not so well two years ago. The committee "played it deadpan" during these long hearings this year," Chancellor Hardin said.

The hearings were to support the university's request for the $7.1 million which would cover all state-supported University expenditures for the biennium except new construction and a few other capital improvement items which are financed outside of the operating budget.

This request compares with the University's current biennial operating appropriation of $28.1 million. The proposed budget is an increase of $9 million, or 32 percent.

Walter K. Beggs, dean of the Teachers College explained that the $109,000 increase asked by his college would be used to take care of the increase of students taking student teaching next year.

"These students started in the University two years ago, and are now ready to take student teaching next year. This 'bulge' in enrollment needs the extra supervisors and instructors we have asked for. The college asked for four new supervisors and the regents cut the request to two and one half before it reached the legislature committee. The current students in student teaching are now partly in the Lincoln schools where supervisors are not adequate for instruction," Dean Beggs said.

David Dow, dean of the College of Law, was the only dean not asking for growth and development funds. He said that the present 150 students now in school, could be increased to 200 without additions to the staff.

Speaking for the College of Pharmacy, Dean R. D. Gibson told the committee that enrollment has increased anticipates it will reach 195 by the end of the next biennium from 39 students two years ago to 123 currently and he anticipates it will reach 195 by the end of the next biennium.

Expert On Latin America To Give Address Friday

An authority on Latin America including the Cuban invasion, Tad Szulc of The New York Times will deliver a public address at the University Friday at 3 p.m. in the Love Library Auditorium.

Diplomatic correspondent of The Times in the Washington, D. C., Latin American Bureau, he will speak on "Latin American and the U.S."

Mr. Szulc, who served The Times as Chief Latin American Correspondent from 1955 to 1961, was the 1959 winner of the Maria Moors Cabot Gold Medal for hemispheric reporting.

He has written a number of books, including "Twilight of the Tyrants" and "The Cuban Invasion." Another book on revolutions will be off the presses this fall, "The Winds of Revolutions."

Mr. Szulc has appeared as visiting lecturer at universities throughout the United States. He is also an experienced radio commentator on Latin American affairs.

His experience also includes work with The Times as a reporter in Southeast Asia.

At present Szulc is on the spot covering the Haiti-Dominican situation.

A&S Deans Conclude Talk On Problems

Twenty-two deans of arts and sciences colleges from 13 central states met yesterday at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

"We form no policies or issue any resolutions. Our purpose is to informally discuss problems in administrative procedures, faculty salaries, methods of instruction and college credit systems," said Walter Miltzer, dean of the University arts and sciences college and coordinator of the conference.

This meeting marked the 55th annual Mississippi Valley Deans of Arts and Sciences Colleges Conferences. The conferences were begun in 1908 and skipped a year during World War II, Dean Miltzer said.

The 18 states represented at the conference were Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Indiana, Kansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, New Mexico, North Dakota, Ohio, Oklahoma, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas and Wyoming.

—Police Hall Of Fame— Criminologist Reinhardt Given National Citation

Dr. James M. Reinhardt, University criminologist, has been elected to the national Police Hall of Fame — the highest honor given to law enforcement authorities.

His selection marks the first time that an educator in the field of police science has been named to the Hall of Fame for Distinguished Service.

Dr. Reinhardt, who will retire this year after 32 years on the University faculty, will receive the 1963 citation and medal at the annual Hall of Fame Banquet next Wednesday, May 15, at Miami Beach, Fla.

The banquet will be part of the biennial convention of the National Police Officers Association of America and a feature of Police Memorial Day proclaimed as May 15 by President Kennedy.

lected Dr. Reinhardt as its 1963 recipient "because of his 40 years of service to the field of law enforcement and his contributions both in practical and theoretical areas of police science."

An internationally known criminologist, Dr. Reinhardt is the author of nine books, including "Murderous Trial of Charles Starkweather," and "The Psychology of Strange Killers." He is now preparing a study of teen-age violence and schizophrenia among adult offenders.

Since 1945, he has appeared regularly as lecturer at the FBI's Academy courses in Washington, D. C.

In announcing his selection, the Association said it "desired to emphasize the fact that law enforcement work has become a profession for which a great deal of preliminary raining on a college level is needed."

'Outstanding' Nominations Due May 20

Nominations are now being accepted by the Daily Nebraskan for its Outstanding Nebraskan awards to be presented to a faculty member and a student who have distinguished themselves on campus.

Any student or faculty member may nominate a candidate in the form of a letter to the Nebraskan office, 51 Student Union.

Letters must be signed by the person making the nomination and will become property of the Nebraskan. The names of those persons making the nominations will be kept confidential.

The deadline for nominations has been set for May 20. Faculty members nominated must have been on the University staff for at least two years. Student candidates may not be paid staff members of the Daily Nebraskan, but columnists are eligible.

Dr. Robert Hough was last semester's faculty choice and Don Ferguson was the student Outstanding Nebraskan.

Psychology 189 Not Offered

Psychology 189 (Genetics) will not be offered for fall registration, as was listed in the University bulletin, according to Dr. Dyingser of the Psychology Department.
