

Peace Corps Team Visits Campus To Recruit, Publicize Opportunities

PEACE CORPS—Volunteer Mary Seberger, a University graduate shows a Venezuelan girl how to cut material in preparation for making a dress. A native of Cozad, she works with 4-H Clubs in Nirgua, a town in northern Venezuela. Students interested in Peace Corps projects are urged to contact the representatives on campus.

According to Robert Bryan, assistant to the Chief of Public Information with the Peace Corps the majority of the Peace Corps members are college students, in fact 70 per cent of them. Most of the members are college graduates, although graduation is not necessary.

Usually just one person is sent to a school to recruit, but Nebraska is one of the seven schools being used as a testing ground for a larger program. The others are Cornell, University of Washington, University of Iowa, University of Michigan, Pennsylvania State, and the University of Illinois. The University of Wisconsin was visited several weeks ago and the team met with success.

There are three members of the advance team, including Dr. Rogers Finch, Chief of Division of University Relations, Barb Laney, Staff Assistance of the Office of Public Affairs and Robert Bryan.

The team has set up headquarters in the South Lobby of the Union (at the "R" Street entrance). Headquarters will be open all day Monday through Friday from 9 to 4, each evening at 7:15 p.m., and Saturday from 9-12.

During these times students may take the test, see movies or have informal talks. The test being administered is a shortened test. It takes one hour instead of the four.

Bryan said that "Many students feel that if they have no special skills there is no place in the Peace Corps for them, but this is not true.

There is a place in the Peace Corps for interested students."

The Peace Corps can actually be considered a graduate course because it develops a career while offering an education. The Corps offers students the opportunity to go abroad for two years when they don't qualify for such programs as a Rhodes Scholarship.

The Peace Corps offers a great opportunity for interested students. There are openings for training this summer and qualified students can still apply. Applicants taking the test while the team is here will be notified within two weeks as to whether they may enter this summer or not.

The Peace Corps sends out a plea for any students willing to volunteer to help the team with typing, putting up posters, answering phones or lettering. If interested, students may go to the Peace Corps Center.

For further information students may call University extension 2467.

County Agent, Professor Will Retire

Two University staff members have been granted retirement by the Board of Regents. They are Dr. Eugene Powell and Robin Spence, who together have accumulated over 70 years of service to the University.

Dr. Powell is a biology professor who has helped two generations of Nebraska physicians plan their medical study programs. He has served the University for 40 continuous years.

Dr. Powell received his Ph.D. degree from the University in 1937 and has been active in the Nebraska Academy of Sciences and the American Association for the Advancement of Science. He is a member of Sigma Xi, sciences national honorary society, and has written several professional papers.

Upon his retirement from the University, Dr. Powell will serve as a visiting professor at Wartburg College, Waverly, Ia.

Spence, a veteran Nebraska agricultural county extension agent has served 31 years.

Spence, a native of Crab Orchard, was first appointed Dakota county agent shortly after his graduation from the University in 1929.

He resigned from the service in 1948 but re-joined it in 1950 and has since been stationed in Gage county where he was staff chairman.

Cow's Tombstone Causes Expulsion Of 6 Alpha Sigs

MISSOURI VALLEY COLLEGE — "Roses are Red, Violets are blue; here lies a cow the Alpha Sigs slew."

This was the inscription on a tombstone near the college chapel in Marshall, Mo. The college's disciplinary board took a more serious view of the prank that precipitated the tombstone, and expelled six students, five of whom were members of Alpha Sigma Phi Fraternity.

A heifer was found dead near the chapel last week; it died from exhaustion.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

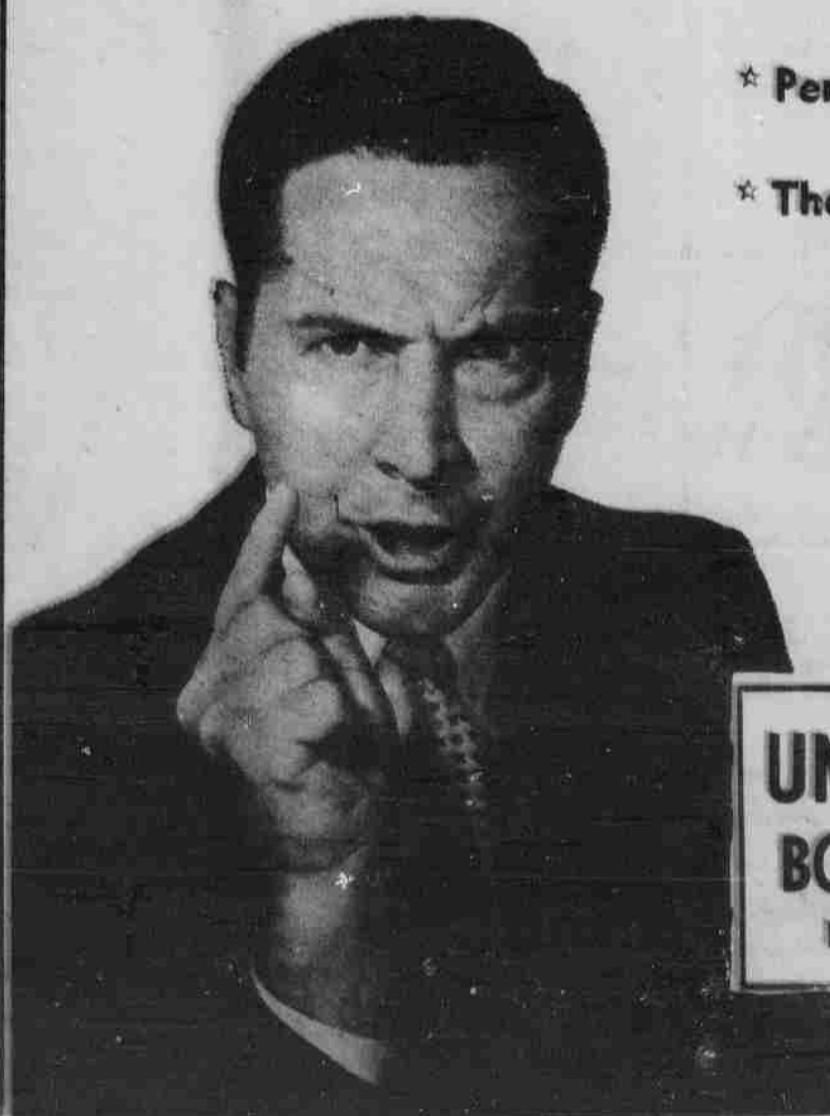

All depends on why he uses it. Most men simply think Mennen Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes. So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably? Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect. How intelligent!
