

Students Receive Full Scholarships For Mexico Study

Six University students and one student from Kearney State Teachers College have been chosen to attend El Colegio de Mexico with all expenses paid, announced Dr. Esquenazi-Mayo, associate professor of Spanish and director of the Latin America Studies Program.

"One of the finest, most important educational institutions in the western hemisphere, you can almost say that it has more faculty members than students," said Dr. Esquenazi.

The students who will attend El Colegio are:

Susan Rutter, sophomore in Spanish, who plans a career in the foreign service or secondary teaching.

Linda Reed, a sophomore in Spanish, who plan a career teaching Spanish in college or the foreign service.

Connie Wallin, a junior in Spanish and English, who plans to teach on the secondary level and eventually in college.

Susan McClymont, sophomore in Spanish, who plans a career in the foreign service.

Gayle Carlson, a sophomore in Spanish, who plans a career in college teaching or the foreign service.

Keenan Eiting, a sophomore in Spanish, who plans to enter business or government in Latin America.

Larry DeBower, a Spanish major from Kearney State Teachers College, who plans a career in the diplomatic corps.

The students were selected by a committee appointed for this purpose by the Administration. The selection of the students was based on their competence to work well in Spanish, overall good academic record and good prospects for future careers in college teaching or the foreign service.

The students will have the round-trip by jet between Lincoln and Mexico City and the fees at El Colegio paid for, plus up to $1200 for the nine months. They will also be covered by insurance against accident and illness for the nine months they will be in Mexico.

Each student will live with a Mexican family and be responsible for his own work. Dr. Esquenazi pointed out that these students will be representatives of the University, Nebraska and the United States.

He also said that he is happy that all of the students participating are native Nebraskans except one who is from Texas.

The purpose of the program is not only to give students the facilities in which to speak and study Spanish, but also to give them a chance to work in one of the most demanding educational institutions in the western hemisphere, said Dr. Esquenazi.

The students will work in history, international affairs, linguistic affairs, and literature and will receive credit at the University for these courses, he said.

One of the conditions that these students must fulfill before they go, said Dr. Esquenazi, is an ability in and knowledge of American history.

Certain books are required reading and they must speak with Prof. James Olson, chairman of the history department, on American history before they leave.

This is the first program of its kind in the history of the University and El Colegio, he said. It is not only a chance for these students to study at a first rate institution, but they will also be studying with the best of the Latin American students who are preparing themselves for a future in the diplomatic service.

The University hopes to have two students from El Colegio here next fall, he said.

"I am very happy that the students of the University are having the opportunity because they will have the whole academic year to study and to develop their intellectual ability and these students deserve it, he said.

Prof. Albin Anderson, of the history department, will be a visiting professor at El Colegio this coming year and will be able to offer these students help if they need it, said Dr. Esquenazi.

We hope it will be a continuous scholarship, he said. The students will leave the week of June 24 by jet from Lincoln for Mexico City where they will be met by El Colegio and the American Embassy.

Orientation courses begin July 1 at the American Embassy and the students will begin first semester classes at El Colegio on July 8.

Dr. Esquenazi, chairman of the Mexican program, said that plans had been in the making for over a year.

He said that he had worked very closely with Prof. Olson, former visiting professor at El Colegio; Prof. Lloyd Weaver, advisor to the foreign students; Dr. Jack Goodwin, officer in exchange of personnel at the American Embassy in Mexico; Walter Millitzer, dean of the College of Arts and Sciences; and many others.

Dean Millitzer said "I think this program is one of the most significant things we've done in the last five years; it is very important part of our Latin American program development.

Union Committee Solicits Opinions On Convocations

The University Convocations Committee and the Student Union talks and topics committee are conducting a poll to determine which speakers the faculty and students would most like to have visit the University next year, according to Susan Moore, publicity chairman.

The names on the poll are typical of the people being considered.

"We hope the students will respond to the poll so we can determine their interest and bring in speakers they want to hear," said Larry Frolik, chairman of the Union talks and topics committee.

Ballots will be located at the S Street lobby of the Student Union, at Love Library, Selleck Quadrangle and the Women's Residence Hall today through Thursday.

They must be placed in the ballot boxes located at each polling place or mailed to the Student Union Program Office.

Examinations For Diplomats In September

The competitive written examination for Foreign Service Officers will be given on Sept. 7, 1963 at selected cities throughout the country, and at diplomatic and consular posts abroad.

In addition to the three options of history, government, and social sciences, management and business administration, and economics, applicants will be tested in English expression, general ability and general background.

Candidates must be at least 21 and under 31 years of age as of July 1, 1963, and must have been citizens of the United States for at least nine years.

A minimum age of 20 has been established for those who either have bachelor's degrees or who have successfully completed their junior year.

Application forms and booklets of sample questions are available from the Board of Examiners for the Foreign Service, room 2529, Department of State, Washington 25, D. C.

Credit Group Will Present Scholarships

The Nebraska Production Credit Association will award $400 in scholarships each year to University students through the University's Foundation.

Herb Potter, Foundation secretary, said today the fund will support male freshman students enrolled in the College of Agriculture. The number of applicants will be determined each year by a scholarship committee of the college.

Other stipulations require that the recipients demonstrate as high school students outstanding ability in leadership, scholarship and be a good moral character and in need of financial assistance.

Applicants also will be asked to submit an essay on "The Production Credit System" as a part of their application, Potter said.

Peace Corps Center The Peace Corps Center will be open this week from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. One-hour placement tests will be given at 9 a.m., 4 p.m. and 7:15 p.m.

Bentley, Beutel Nominated For Outstanding Nebraskan

Two more persons have been nominated for the title of "Outstanding Nebraskan." Letters of nomination for John Bentley, Publicity Director of Intercollegiate Athletics, and for Frederick Beutel, professor of Law, were received yesterday by the Daily Nebraskan.

"I am aware," read the letter nominating Bentley, "that the 'Outstanding Nebraskan' faculty award goes only to faculty members. However, I am asking you to suspend the rules to allow the nomination of John Bentley to be accepted."

Bentley's letter stated that he is as much a part of the University as is the coliseum, where he has served for seventeen years.

He has been more than an athletic publicist, said the letter, he has spread goodwill in the name of the University wherever he has travelled.

"John Bentley never considered his work as just a job. He has that unique quality which makes men toil overtime for something more important than financial reward."

The mark of an outstanding faculty member, said the letter, is the harvest of his labor, — his students who go on to accomplishments of their own. This has been the case with Bentley. The upper echelons of the state's and midwest's sportswriters are swelled with "Bentley's boys."

Frederick Beutel, professor of Law, is a professor who is relatively unknown on this campus, read his letter of nomination. He is, however, "chiefly responsible for the national significance of one of the professional colleges."

According to the letter, Professor Beutel arrived at the University in 1945 and reopened the College of Law which had been closed during World War II.

"It is because of his efforts that the college of law now has such an excellent academic rating," it read.

As dean of the college from 1945 to 1949, Prof. Beutel completely reorganized its structure. He revised the curriculum, created the aptitude exam procedure, and reorganized the Nebraska Law Review.

Professor Beutel has written seven books and thirty-four law review articles. His books are used as text and reference books at all the leading law colleges in the country.

Beutel, listed in "Who's Who," is a member of the American Law Institute, an organization which periodically modifies and revises the laws on which this country is based.

"Outside of class, Professor Beutel is always eager to discuss and assist the students in their legal education. His tireless efforts to form the minds of his students into analytical perfection has endeared him to many."

The end of the academic year will mark the end of Beutel's 18-year career at the University. He will 'retire' to Puerto Rico, where he will again organize a university into "a nucleus of legal education."

Forty-three students signed the letter which terminated, "Professor Beutel should be honored by this University and its students for his many years of endeavor which have resulted in one of the finest law colleges in the nation."

Med School Gets Psychiatry Grants

The University College of Medicine in Omaha is receiving continued support from the National Institute of Mental Health for three General Practice (GP) programs. The graduate training grants in psychiatry total $74,736.

Dr. Cecil Wittson, director of the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute, is supervising two of the grants — the GP Residency Training grant in its fifth year and the GP Special Training grant in its second year.

Dr. LaVern Strough, associate professor of neurology and psychiatry, is training program director for the third continuation grant, the GP Postgraduate Education grant now received for the fourth consecutive year.

'Gallery' Provides Publishing Outlet

A new magazine of poetry, an art portfolio, an essay and a short story is currently on sale at the Nebraska and Campus Bookstores.

Edited by two university students, Adam Staib and Dick Farley, and a former student, Roy Scheele, the purpose of the magazine "Gallery" is to give new writers a chance to have their work published.

Karl Shapiro of the University English department is advisory editor for "Gallery."

The debut edition announces plans to publish four times a year in April, July, October and January.

In addition to the two bookstores on campus, the magazine is being sold at Miller and Paine's, Gold's and bookstores throughout the Omaha area.

The three editors, who make up Row Charter Associates, accept manuscripts from writers from all parts of the country. The current edition contains the work of people from Omaha, Lincoln and New York City.

Staib said the magazine had met a good reception in the Omaha area and is being sold in the gift shop of Joslyn Art Museum there.

"Gallery" sells for thirty-five cents and is identifiable by a sketch of Andre Malreaux on the cover.

Minnesota Prof Discovered Buried Alive Under Books

University of Minnesota Students passing by one of the campus buildings heard frantic cries for help coming from one of the ground floor windows. After a considerable amount of excavation had been done by two of the campus custodians, an embarrassed psychology professor was extricated from beneath his own bookcase.

Colorado State University Warm spring weather brought out a rash of fraternity pranks at Colorado State University last week. The Chi Omega's heard a noise, saw a face at the window and proceeded to fight it off by throwing a book through the window. Their victim was the Sig Ep College Days float dummy. Earlier that night, police officers caught ten fraternity men attempting to "tee-pee" anything in Fort Collins that would hold the paper.

Texas A&M Texas A&M undergraduate candidates for degrees were warned by the Academic Council that they are required to attend all scheduled classes during the period May 20-24. The announcement emphasized that any unauthorized absence during that period will be sufficient cause to withhold the degree at the commencement exercises.

State University of Iowa Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity received a new pledge after Easter vacation when Ron Anderson brought back an 18-inch baby alligator from Florida. The alligator was accepted pretty well when he first arrived, but after a week the novelty wore off and the smell stayed, reported Anderson. The pledge's first home was the chapter room, but upon rumors to assassinate him, Anderson moved him to a basement closet. The alligator's daily diet consisted raw hamburger and worms plus attempts at a few fingers. After signs saying "the gator must swing", Anderson sold him to a coed who planned to give it to her cousin at Iowa State.

NU Contributes Rhodes Scholars

Only 22 other institutions in the nation have furnished more Rhodes Scholars for Oxford University than the University of Nebraska.

Seventeen University students have been selected as Rhodes Scholars since the inauguration of the program in 1904.

Only one other member of the Big Eight Conference, Oklahoma, has produced more Rhodes Scholars than Nebraska.

Savannah State College Three hundred and forty students withdrew from the school in protest of an administration decision not to renew the contract of one of the professors. Five hundred more applications for withdrawal are pending, according to the registrars office. Only 200 of the school's 1200 students were even attending classes.

The argument over the professor's dismissal apparently stemmed from the fact that he was attempting to integrate white students into the all-Negro college.

Iowa State University The president of the student body at Iowa State has resigned his position. He termed his reason for resigning as a "problem of goal conflict." It was reported that scholastic difficulties played an important part in his decision. The resigning president stated that it was necessary for him to determine where his values lie, and to act in accordance with those values.

Students Elect Biz Ad Reps

Elections for members of the student advisory board for the College of Business Administration will be held from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Voters will elect one woman and one man from the following junior candidates: Jerry Denton, Robert Failing, John Houtchens, Judith Johnson, Gary Oye, Robert Pohlman, and Robert Purcell.

The two senior board members will also consist of one woman and one man. The candidates are Jackie Hansen, James Jochim, Randall Sittler and Stanley Wilson.

Madrigal Concert, Symposium Set For This Week

Two University musical events will take place this week.

The annual Madrigal concert will be held at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow at the Student Union. Prof. John Moran will direct and Prof. Jack Snider will conduct the brass ensemble.

The annual event includes a choral program by the Madrigals and the ensemble will play "A Requiem in Our Time."

The final contemporary music symposium of the year, sponsored jointly by the department of music and the Union, will be presented Thursday at 8 p.m. in the Union ballroom.

Prof. Earl Jenkins, tenor, will sing selections by Berg. Prof. Priscilla Parson will play cello and present compositions by Crane. A student instrumental group will present a number by Reich.

Alberty Selected For Dean's Post

Dr. Robert Alberty, a University graduate, was named dean of the University of Wisconsin.

A noted biological chemist, he received his Bachelor of Science degree in 1943 and his Master of Science degree in 1944, both in chemistry from the University. He received his doctorate from Wisconsin in 1947.

Alberty is particularly noted for his studies on the fractionation of plasma proteins, the field in which he conducted research for his doctorate.

In addition, the Lincolnite is a leader in research fields concerning the electrophoresis of proteins, theory of the moving boundary method, ionization constants, enzyme kinetics and nuclear magnetic resonance.

At Nebraska, Dr. Alberty was a member of Phi Beta Kappa, Phi Lambda Upsilon, Pi Mu Epsilon and Student Council.
