

GOLDWATER... Group backs conservative.

Marr Supports Goldwater

Charles Marr, state chairman of Nebraska Youth for Goldwater, announced Tuesday that a Youth for Goldwater movement has been formed on the campus of the University of Nebraska and will hold its first meeting Tuesday, Sept. 31 at 7 p.m. in the Pan-American room of the Nebraska Student Union. The meeting will be highlighted by a talk by Jim Harff, a former chairman of the National Young Republicans. Also on the agenda will be Senator Goldwater's speech that was delivered at the National Young Republicans convention in June in which Senator Goldwater attacks liberalism as being reactionary. According to Marr, the Youth for Goldwater movement was organized to inform the students and faculty that Senator Goldwater best represents the desires of youth for a better future. The group plans to study the economic and political philosophy of Senator Goldwater and his opponents, through tapes, films, and speeches so students will be well informed on both sides. Marr also announced that bumper stickers will be given away today at the Upper Class Activities Mart. Similar Youth for Goldwater movements have already been initiated at both Omaha University and Doane College.

Hardin Forecasts 20,000 Enrollment

Chancellor Clifford M. Hardin told members of the University of Nebraska faculty Tuesday evening that the institution they serve is growing into a major center of higher education. A total enrollment of 20,000 or more is an approaching reality which we must be prepared to accommodate. The Chancellor spoke to 400 staff members at the faculty homecoming dinner, held this year at the Nebraska Center for Continuing Education.

He recalled a quotation from his second address to a University faculty in 1955 when, he said, "on our own campuses during the early 1960's we very well may expect 12,000 students as compared with the present 7,600."

"This is 1963," the Chancellor said, "and it now looks as though we did not overestimate our long-term rate of growth. We are still a little short of the 12,000 mark, but we are coming close."

In a review of the University since 1955, the Chancellor noted these developments:

... A near doubling of the University's current funds budget composed of total revenues—from $11.5 million to $21 million.

... Steady growth of graduate education.

... Construction of the Nebraska Center and inauguration of growing program in continuing education.

... An appreciable reduction in the undergraduate dropout rate.

... Attraction of more of the state's topflight high school graduates. This year 51 of the state's top 100 high school graduates are enrolled at the University compared with 33 last year and lesser numbers earlier.

... Improved working relationships with Nebraska high schools.

... Closer cooperation between the University and other Nebraska colleges and universities.

... Participation in international educational programs through University operations in Turkey and an exchange agreement with El Colegio de Mexico.

... Early participation and subsequent state leadership in educational television.

... Further development of a Nebraska medical center served by the College of Medicine and the Eppley Institute for Cancer Research.

The Chancellor expressed "gratitude that the legislature is beginning to recognize the need for faculty salary adjustments as related to quality."

"This recognition," he said, "suggests that we are beginning to get the answer many of us have awaited... the answer that Nebraska really wants a first-rate University and that with time and work and patience, it shall have it."

Ross, University Agree; 'Traditions' Are Vetoed

Regents Approve New Dormitory

By GRANT PETERSON
Senior Staff Writer
University of Nebraska Regents Monday gave approval to a variety of proposed campus improvement projects totaling an estimated $497,000, including acquisition of approximately six acres of Lincoln property near 17th and Vine as the construction site for a new 960-student dormitory.

Business Manager Carl Donaldson said plans for the dormitory, similar in design to the newly-completed twin towers, are in the final stages of development and may be ready for bids within a month.

The new dormitory, to accommodate men students, will be a single housing unit of 13 floors plus dining facilities. It will be located north of Vine and front on the east side of 17th.

Acquisition of the construction site, approved Monday by the Regents, involves the purchase of two plots, one of about 4.2 acres from the Rock Island railroad for $115,000, the other, a little over 2 acres fronting on 17th, from the Abel Investment Co., for $80,000.

Purchase of the land will be made with dormitory system revenues. Construction will be financed by revenue bonds which the University is already authorized to negotiate.

Other campus development projects approved by the Regents:

—Acceptance of a low bid of $38,314 from the Olson Construction Company to improve the front entrance setting for the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery. The project includes the construction of an 18-foot wide walkway a block long in the center of 12th street in front of the building. The walk will be reinforced to permit use by fire-fighting equipment in event of emergency but will not be open to motor vehicle traffic.

What is now the brick paved street between the Gallery and the Social Science buildings to the east will be torn up. Donaldson said ripping out the present sidewalk bordering 12th St. on the east also is part of the plan.

Permanent closing of 12th street fits into the long-range NU master plan to cut down through traffic within the campus.

The aim, said Donaldson, is to provide internal drives which lead mostly to auto parking places.

—An agreement to trade fractional lots with Alpha Chi Omega, a sorority, contingent upon additional payment of $1,000 by the sorority. The property is near 18th and Vine.

—An agreement to swap University-owned property north of Huntington Avenue near the Ag Campus for an equal area owned by the Omaha, Lincoln and Beatrice Railway Company south of Huntington. The trade will enable the University to consolidate its land holdings south of Huntington.

University Nixes All College Nights

By FRANK PARTSCH
Junior Staff Writer

Upperclassmen returning to the University this year have noticed the absence of two events considered traditions in the past: the parade accompanying the first pep rally and the College Night Dance.

Vice Chancellor G. Robert Ross explained Tuesday that the University received a report from the Lincoln Police Department and many complaints from parents of students concerning the College Night Dance last year. The police said that the dance was overcrowded, that liquor laws were violated, and that a combination of these resulted in a traffic hazard when the dance was over.

As a result, Ross said, the University was forced to take action. Following a meeting of the advisors of the Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council, Helen Snyder Dean of Women, Frank M. Hallgren, Director of the Placement Division, and Ross, a letter was sent to the presidents of all fraternities and sororities on campus.

The letter emphasizes that College Night is not a University function and that it has not met University standards in the past. It states that "the University cannot permit this activity, and groups which support it in any way will be considered in violation."

Boyd Waddle, owner of East Hills Country Club, said that his manager had been approached by several students trying to hold a College Night dance, but that they were refused. Waddle said that East Hills holds a liquor-by-the-drink license and any large party involving minors would certainly put this license in jeopardy.

Ross said that the Student Affairs Office supports the decision of the Corn Cobs and Tassels not to hold the parade.

He added that the University has taken no action prohibiting the parade, and that he thought the organizers of the parade were wise in their decision. Several students were injured in scuffling which accompanied this parade last year.

Bill Alschwede, president of Corn Cobs, said that organizational difficulties caused by the lateness of the University opening and the comparative earliness of the first game and pep rally were largely behind the decision.

The fact that there was no parade this year, according to Alschwede, has no bearing on parades in the future, and that, as the situation exists now, the Corn Cobs and Tassels will decide each year when planning the pep rally.

STUCK BETWEEN FLOORS—Because the elevators in Twin Tower stop only on odd-numbered floors, students with rooms on even-numbered floors must walk up or down at least one flight of stairs. Here freshmen Virginia Wimmer and Candace Toelle enlist the aid of dubious junior Loren Penkava to get to the second floor.

Activities Sign-Up Set Today

All upperclassmen may become acquainted with and sign up for activities at the Associated Women's Students (AWS) Activity Mart this afternoon in the paddleball room of the Union from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Twenty organizations will participate. Each organization will send representatives to the mart. Two new groups, Nebraska Youth for Goldwater and Faculty Forum, will participate.

This mart will serve for both city and ag campus organizations.

Upperclass men and women are eligible to work in activities four weeks before freshmen. Those who sign up will be contacted by the organization within a week after the mart.

Dorm Residents Get Exercise

Many residents in Pound and Cather Halls are complaining that they are involuntarily joining the President's physical fitness program by walking up and down stairs because the elevators stop only on odd-numbered floors. Those living on even-numbered floors must walk a flight to catch an elevator.

The purpose of putting them only on half of the floors is to save time and money," said W. C. Harper, director of University Services. He pointed out that only half as many stops had to be built, saving the University a great deal of money.

"It would take the students a lot longer to get from their top floors if the elevators had to stop at every floor," Wayne T. Kuncl, director of Cather Hall, noted.

"I really haven't heard many complaints about the situation now that students have gotten adjusted to it," he said. "Moving in was our greatest worry and it seemed to move smoothly."

Harper pointed out that students in other living units have to walk farther as there are no elevators. The girls living on fourth floor of Piper Hall have to walk up all four flights.

There are no plans to change the situation, at least not in the near future, said Harper. However, the same plan will probably not be used on future buildings, he added.

The length of the lunch lines has been another controversial subject in the new dorms. Harper pointed out that nearly 1,200 students are being served in an hour and a half, which is faster than the old serving lines.

"Our main problems is that of adjustment," said Harper. "Whenever there are new situations or new students, it takes a little longer, but after the first few weeks the students get used to the process and the time is cut down considerably."

Lending Library Will Provide Art

Students wishing to "spruce" their living quarters may borrow pictures from the Art Lending Library today and tomorrow in the Union Music Room A from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Lending Library will be held in the Ag Union Monday and Tuesday.

More than 300 pictures will be loaned for the semester. Students must pay one dollar deposit. This will be returned when the pictures are returned in January. Students will be responsible for any extensive damage.

Several pictures have been bought since last semester, according to Sally Davenport, chairman, including several from the student art sale held last spring.

Reporters Sought For Nebraskan

The Daily Nebraskan will hold coffee tonight at 6:45 p.m. in 334 Student Union for all upperclassmen wishing to become reporters for the paper.

Students wishing to write are urged to sign at the Activities Mart, if possible, and are also invited to attend the coffee. Editors of the Daily Nebraskan will explain work schedules and deadlines to those attending and will answer any questions students may have.

Union Seal

Twenty Five Years Old — In celebration of their 25th anniversary, the Nebraska Union will give away free candy bars with each fifty cents purchase made in the Crib cafeteria, Ag Dell barber shop or at the main desk, today. Robert Barnes, assistant director of Nebraska Union, said that some similar observance of the 25th year will be made on the 25th day of each month during the year. Any special event sponsored by the Union will be given the 25th anniversary seal. Any extraordinarily good program prepared by a Union committee will receive this seal, said Barnes.

Freshman Camp Deadline Today

Today is the deadline for freshmen men and women to register for the YWCA Freshman Camp which will be held from Friday through Sunday at Camp Kitaki near South Bend, Neb.

The fee for the camp is thirteen dollars and interested freshmen can register in 335B in the Nebraska Union.
