

NU Grad Student Leads Varied Life

Beware of a new political science graduate student recently arrived on the campus. If you should ask Nurretin (Nicky) Uzunogh from Turkey to speak in his native language, he may laugh and say "Gobble, gobble, gobble!"

Nicky, a May, 1963, graduate of Northwestern Missouri State College, is no stranger to the University of Nebraska.

He matriculated as a freshman at NU in 1959. A full Rotary scholarship enabled him to attend the Maryville, Mo., college in his sophomore year.

A member of Phi Lambda Chi fraternity there, he majored in political science and French, garnished with "lots of history and economics."

The brown-eyed energetic 23-year-old also served as the president of Northwestern Missouri State's Cosmopolitan Club for a year.

Nicky's summers as well as winters in this country have been spent in educational ways. Summer 1960 found him working as a translator for the Berlitz Institute in Washington, D.C.

The Seattle World's Fair was his destination in the summer of 1962, when he traveled from New York to Washington state and back again.

But this past summer, it was back to the books, as he enrolled at NU as a beginning graduate student in the political science department.

He is grateful for the education which the Missouri college, with some 3,000 students, gave him, citing a "real good education" there.

Nicky came to the United States for college after working for the American Embassy in Ankara, Turkey.

When he completes his Master's Degree, he plans to work in Turkey's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, where he has already twice been offered a job. There, he will continue to do graduate work — in the country's tuition-free schools.

A tennis buff, he's already been on the NU courts, although he has an inkling that nine hours of graduate work will hamper the furthering of many tennis friendships.

RAM President Pokorny Defines Role For Dorms

The Residence Association for Men (RAM) will operate on a different concept of dormitory government than has been used in the past, according to Gary Pokorny, president of RAM.

This year the RAM Council is stressing the role of the individual house rather than the strength of the central government. The houses, seventeen from Selleck Quadrangle and two from the Capital Hotel, have, for the most part, been dependent on the Council for activities and social functions in the past.

The long range goal of the Council, said Pokorny, is to develop stronger houses with the RAM Council acting primarily as a co-ordinating unit for their activities.

Each house in RAM elects a president, vice president, treasurer, and directors for the social, activities, scholastic, and intramural affairs of the house. The RAM Council is composed of the house presidents in addition to the executive council, who are elected from Selleck as a whole.

Pokorny explained that the strong house concept has the advantage of having people work together who live in the same sections of the dorm and are likely to know each other better. Co-operation in an organization as large as RAM (approximately 1,000 members) is sometimes difficult to attain.

The idea of the strong individual houses, which has also been suggested as a practical form of government for Pound and Cather Halls, has been one of the main topics in recent house meetings, orientation meetings, and the RAM Council meeting Thursday night.

An outstanding house is chosen each year on the basis of scholarship, activities and intramurals and receives an award at the annual Awards Banquet. In recent years, the contest has been dominated by Benton House.

Unicorns To Meet Today Enrollment, Research Studies Led To 'School Of Home Ec'

By Marv McNeff
Ag News Editor

All off campus independent University of Nebraska students are invited to attend the first meeting of Unicorns today at 7 p.m., 235 Nebraska Union, Jean Tilman, president said.

Unicorns is an organization which promotes good scholarship, encourages worthwhile service to the NU campus and community.

The College of Agriculture's Home Economics Department has increased its enrollment, and has seen the area of research needs and studies expand to the point that it has become desirable to raise the department to the status of a school within the Ag college.

According to Dr. Virginia Trotter, Associate Dean of the College of Agriculture, and Director of the new School of Home Economics, the change was authorized by the 1963 Nebraska Unicameral to allow the School to develop a more autonomous program in line with increased demand for service courses intended for non-Home Ec majors. The change becomes effective Oct. 19.

The service courses could be defined as studies dealing with problems confronting everyone in their daily living situation, Dr. Trotter said. These problems include family spending, good marital relationships, proper child care and adequate nutrition. These subjects are not covered by any other departments in the University.

The new School will be composed of 5 departments, each in one specialized area of the home economics discipline.

The departments and chairmen are: Family Economics and Management—Dr. Lawrence McKinney; Food and Nutrition—Dr. Hazel Fox; Home Economics Education—Dr. Hazel Anthony; Human Development and the Family—Dr. Harold Able; Textiles, Clothing and Design—Professor Violetta Leite.

The School is planning on future expansion including a teaching center on city campus which would offer the service courses to the general student population.

Dr. Trotter said the 1963 Legislature has included $100,000 in the present University budget for replacing the present Starr St. and 16th St. home management laboratories with modern on-campus structures. Work on the new laboratories is in the planning state, with completion of the units scheduled for 1965.

The opportunities in the home economics field are expanding rapidly, Dr. Trotter said, due to the increased demand for Home Ed training in the U.S. and the chance for service overseas with the Peace Corps and similar developmental organizations.

Future changes at the new School will include a progressive curriculum revision to provide more 'depth' Dr. Trotter said she expected enrollment to double within ten years.

Air Conditioning In Future For Cather, Pound Halls

Residents of the Twin Towers dormitories will be able to breathe easier in water cooled air—but not until next summer.

Last Monday, the Board of Regents approved improvement and extension of the chilled water and steam distribution system originating in the University city campus power plant.

Immediate purpose of the chilled water project, according to Paul Owen, power plant engineer, is to extend the distribution system to the area of the new dormitories, thus cooling Twin Towers by next summer.

Construction involving the inserting of pipe in yet-to-be-dug trenches and in existing tunnels near Raymond Hall will be begun next week, according to George R. Miller, administrator of the University's physical plant.

While the pipes are being installed, some of the walkways around campus will be either covered or torn up. Included is the sidewalk south of, and running parallel to, Andrews Hall and the main walk just east of 14th St., from 14th and S. to the north end of the women's P.E. field.

Other walks which will possibly be closed include the main walk running east on the north side of S St. from 14th to 16th, and the sidewalk in front of the Women's Residence Halls.

Walkways will be restored to normal by January, when all installation is to be complete.

When completed, the system will be capable of cooling half the campus.

Does a man really take unfair advantage of women when he uses Mennen Skin Bracer?

All depends on why he uses it. Most men simply think Menthol-Iced Skin Bracer is the best after-shave lotion around. Because it cools rather than burns. Because it helps heal shaving nicks and scrapes. Because it helps prevent blemishes. So who can blame them if Bracer's crisp, long-lasting aroma just happens to affect women so remarkably? Of course, some men may use Mennen Skin Bracer because of this effect. How intelligent!
