Coeds To Vie For Dent Queen

The senior class of the Dental College is sponsoring a "Miss Impressions" contest.
 "Impressions" is the name of the Dental College yearbook, and this year, for the first time, there will be a "Miss Impressions" section.
 Letters about the contest have been sent to all women's living units. They are to select one candidate who will go through a series of interviews in which "Miss Impressions" will be determined. The interview board will consist of senior dental students and faculty members.

 The board will judge the girls on personality, poise, charm, attractiveness, photographic qualities, and general knowledge of dental care and oral hygiene.
 December 20 is the deadline for the living units to select candidates. The candidates and their interview times will appear in the Daily Nebraskan.

National Cooperation Strengthens Library

The University is cooperating with the National Agricultural Library at Washington, D.C. to provide better service to scientists and students as a means of strengthening the entire economy.
 Official hope to accomplish this objective by preventing unnecessary duplication of research, expanding resources, and expediting research through national cooperation.

Dr. Frank A. Lundy, University librarian, is a member of the new National Library Advisory committee assigned to the task.

He says that steps are being taken to improve and expand the bibliography of agriculture and to provide maximum depth and breadth of subject matter. Such a development would benefit scientists and students in Nebraska and the nations.

The committee sought to implement solutions to the problems by giving primary responsibility to the land-grant colleges and universities for acquiring all publications issued in their own states; by acquiring publications from some foreign areas of the world; and through bibliographical cooperation and contractual agreements or services.

It is hoped that a new National Agricultural Library can be built outside Washington, D.C. to handle the volume of printed materials needed to meet needs. Consideration also is being given to the establishment of regional service centers.

In the near future, it is possible that libraries may have a direct electronic circuit to the National Agricultural Library in Washington. The National Library is currently investigating an automation project that would unite the facility with regional libraries of which Nebraska's would be one.

The University's new $1.2 million library at the College of Agriculture and Home Economics is expected to be ready for occupancy in the fall of 1964. Eventually it will house 250,000 to 300,000 volumes.

The University's agricultural library has a long record of close cooperation with the National Library. It was one of five libraries in the nation selected to serve the needs of 18,000 agricultural scientists in nine states. This service was dropped in a federal economy move several years ago.
