—IFC Hears Robinson—

Greeks Must Parallel
Goals Of University

Fraternities must strive to parallel the aims and purposes of the university if they wish to become a stronger force within their institution, and the simplest, most obvious way to accomplish this parallel is through educational goals.

These were the views presented to the Interfraternity Council (IFC) last night by Ted Robinson, assistant dean and adviser to fraternities at Iowa State University, Ames, Ia.

Dean Robinson, who is a guest of the IFC during its Pledge Education Week, compared the IFC at Nebraska with his own at Iowa State, and stated "my impression of your fraternity system is very good . . . I am very impressed."

Robinson said that there must be no conflict between loyalty to the fraternity and loyalty to the university. Fraternities must work to improve relations between themselves and their university administrations.

Dean Robinson concluded his presentation by presenting a model positive pledge training program.

—Give the pledge a sense of belonging to a group identified with the university, with a realization of its resultant obligations.

—Inculcate an understanding of the purposes of a university.

—Aid the pledge in fulfilling his academic potential.

—Stimulate an interest in learning, cultural development, and the selection of a purposeful set of values.

—Increase the pledge's understanding of various personalities.

—Train the pledge in social amenities, and create opportunities for social experiences.

—Educate the pledge regarding essential matters of his fraternity (objectives, history, traditions, lore) and his fraternity's relationship to the greek system and to the university.

In other action, the IFC passed a motion confirming participation for all fraternities in the spring rush weekend, to be held March 6-7.

Department Renumbers
Frosh English Courses

By Mike Keedy
Junior Staff Writer

The freshman English program has been revamped this semester, according to Dr. Gene Hardy, director of freshman English.

The three semester sequence, known as English X, 1 and 2 has been discontinued. Also English 3 and 4 have been renumbered.

Under the new system, 95 per cent of all freshmen will take two semesters of English, known now as English 1 and 2, receiving three credit hours for each semester.

Honors sections are now termed English 3 and 4, and accommodate the upper 5 per cent of first-year students. All sections are presently meeting three times a week.

Hardy was quick to deny that the measure might constitute a stiffening of qualifications in view of the recent hike in freshman enrollment.

"Its enactment is purely for purposes of simplification," he said. He added, "There is no need for the old three-semester system; it is too involved and unwieldy, accomplishing nothing that an equivalent program carried out in two semesters cannot."

Physiologist To Speak
Today On Advances

Dr. Charles Pomerat, one of the nation's foremost cell physiologists who is director of research, Pasadena, Calif. Foundation for Medical Research, will speak twice in Lincoln today.

At noon he will address the Multiple Sclerosis association, Lancaster county chapter, at the Capital Hotel, and at 3:30 p.m., will lecture to a University audience in Bessy Hall auditorium. In his University lecture Pomerat will report on recent advances in the use of tissue culture in experimental biology.

His appearance at the University is under the auspices of the department of zoology and physiology and the University Research Council.

To alleviate increased pressures on any students, the English department is making a veteran member of its staff available to give extra help to those having difficulty due to the modification.

"However," Hardy stressed, "students registered in the old English 1 classes will be allowed to complete the sequence by taking the old English 2, for two credits, either in the summer or during the fall term."

The English department emphasized that the course content of the sequence is not being changed, only redistributed.

Although students continued to register for either English B or 3 this semester in order to avoid any confusions or interruptions during registration, the Registrar's office is now changing the registration of these students to read English 1 (three credits).

During the past week many students have been flocking to 221 Andrews Hall, as well as the Registrar's office, attempting to get needed signatures in order to make the changes official.

"Students who fail one of the English courses or re-enter school after an absence of one or more semesters will be advised individually by either Dr. Hardy or me," noted Mr. Ned Hedges, assistant to Dr. Hardy.

Thus far the English department views the innovation as both a necessary reform and a probably success. Those freshmen instructors contacted expressed satisfaction with the new program. They noted a relaxation of previous pressures involved in having to approach sections of B and 3 differently.
