

Tankers To Big 8 Meet

Nebraska swimmers head into the Big Eight meet this weekend at Oklahoma with a respectable 8-2 dual record. Coach Dick Klass sees the squad as a strong contender for at least second place.

"I don't think they've improved quite as fast as I thought they would," Klass said, "but last weekend they showed a great deal of effort and promise with a win over Kansas State and a real close loss to Kansas."

Klass figures defending champion Oklahoma to repeat the crown. The OU squad boasts two all-American freestylers in distance ace Charles Schutte and sprinter John Bernard. The Sooners have won the crown 13 of the last 14 years.

By taking second last year, the Cornhuskers finished higher than any team since the 1930's. Klass feels Nebraska will fight for the number two slot again with Kansas and Iowa State.

He points out that while the Huskers have improved since last year, the Jayhawks and Cyclones are much stronger than last year.

Nebraska's best bet for an event title looks like medley relay team of Bill Henry,

Mike Jackson, Bill Fowles and Keefe Ludwig. The quartet has done 3:48.9 this year, just two-tenths of a second off the record currently held by Nebraska.

Best chance at individual crowns appear to be backstroke. Henry has done the 200-yard backstroke in 2:06.5, a second off the league record. Jackson's time of 2:22.5 in the 200 breaststroke is under the conference mark.

Other Husker contenders will be Dave Frank, sprints; Fowles, backstroke; Tom Nickerson, freestyle; Ron Gabrielson, sprints; and Chuck Flansbrug, breaststroke.

Other top contenders for individual honors are OU's Schutte in the distance freestyle and Bernard in the freestyle sprints, KU's Jim Basile in the breaststroke, John Kemp of Oklahoma in the butterfly events and Iowa State's Wayne Oras who is undefeated in diving.

Bowl Bid Policy Set At Meeting

In their quarterly meeting of the Big Eight faculty representatives devoted most of their time to the post-season bowl game policy.

They have returned to their old policy of accepting bids. All teams must have approval from the conference before accepting a bowl bid.

The Big Eight also appointed a committee to review the formula for distributing post-season football revenue. A report will be made at the May meeting.

They also agreed on a system of letters of intent for basketball players among Big Eight schools.

Commissioner Wayne Duke refused to release the amount of money spent by the University of Nebraska at the last Orange Bowl game, stating it was about the same as expenditures in previous Miami trips. The cost was estimated at between $80 and $85 thousand.

Duke also declined to reveal the conference outlay in transporting, housing and entertaining officials from other Big Eight schools at the game.

A suggestion by State Senator George Syas of Omaha that senior players from the Big Eight hook up on a post-season game with seniors from the Southwest Conference arrived too late to be considered Duke explained.

In other action, the faculty officials:

—Approved another year of eligibility for tackle Roh Griesse of Nebraska. The Kearney athlete was injured during the first game his sophomore year.

—Approved another year of eligibility for Larry Hills, Iowa State track athlete.

—Enlarged the range of freshman athletic contests other than football to include junior college, four-year college reserve teams and service teams.

—Did not increase the number of freshmen contests.

—This being Olympic year, they gave permission to freshmen track athletes to compete unattached in Kansas, Kansas State and Colorado relay carnivals.

—Reaffirmed that Duke will name date and site of playoff in case of tie for basketball championship.

—Granted Iowa State permission to play Colorado State in Denver U. Stadium Thanksgiving Day of 1966.

—Did not increase grants-in-aid ceilings of one hundred grants on football and 24 on basketball.

Sixth Loop Win Jinxes Cagers

Victory number six has been very elusive for the Nebraska cagers and it eluded them once more Monday night at Norman, Oklahoma.

The Sooners, who are the cellar club of the Big Eight loop dropped the Huskers to the tune of 82-76.

Oklahoma now has a 3-10 mark, while NU is at 5-8.

The big difference was at the free throw line. Oklahoma hit on 20 of its 27 attempts, as the Cornhuskers could convert only 8 of 15.

Nebraska has now failed in its last three chances to pick up its sixth win. The last opportunity will come next Monday at Boulder as the Huskers face Colorado.

Four men tallied in double figures for the Huskers. Charlie Jones was the leader with 16, next were Jim Yates with 14, Grant Simmons with 13 and Daryl Petsch 12.

Yates and Webb led NU rebounders with 9 each.

No Chance For Finmen To Finish In Eighth

Swimming is the only varsity sport in the Big Eight in which it is impossible for a team to finish eighth. Until this year it was impossible to finish lower than sixth. Oklahoma State added swimming to its sports program this year, but Missouri still has no swimming squad.

Super-Modified Racers Keep Students Occupied

By Mike Sayre
Sports Staff Writer

Two members of Sigma Alpha Mu have been burning up the super-modified tracks during the past year. The pair, Ron Rosenberg and Leroy Breslow, are members of the Nebraska Modified Racing Association.

The club, consisting of 40 enthusiasts, holds races at Mid-West Speedway, Lincoln Speedway and Eagle Speedway, from May 1 to September.

Rosenberg, who instigated the venture, has been interested in cars and racing since he can remember. In the past, he has worked on pit crews during the racing season.

Rosenberg explains that any U.S. engine may be used, with no limit on modification, to compete in super-modified races.

Last year they raced a 1960 Corvette 283 cubic inch engine on a Model A modified frame. With roller cams, three two-bar carburetors, aluminum rods and a quick-change rear end, the engine developed 400 horse-power at top end.

This year the rules have been relaxed to allow use of tubular aluminum frames. Rosenberg plans to drop a 1961 Corvette 327 cubic inch engine with fuel-injection onto a "rail" body of aluminum tubing. The body will be only 22 inches wide on a 90 inch wheel-base. The total weight of the car will be between 1200 and 1500 pounds. With the engine putting out nearly 500 horses, Ron expects an improved performance on the circuit this season.

Building super-modified cars occupies a good deal of the pair's time. Rosenberg estimates he spends 20 hours each week during the racing season working on the car.

Besides the time involved in keeping up the car, Rosenberg estimates they have nearly $2000 tied up in the project. Summer earnings are the main source of the money used to finance the operation.

In order to eliminate the possibility that either of the pair's parents might be held liable in the event of an accident, Rosenberg and Breslow have formed a corporation, B and R Automotive.

To further ensure the success of their car in super-modified races, Ron and Leroy hire a professional driver to race the car. The driver receives a set percentage of the winnings for his services.

The only timed performance of their car is in a quarter mile drag. Using the 1960 Corvette engine on an A frame, with only third gear, the car covered the quarter mile in 18.7 seconds with a top speed of over 100 miles per hour.

Rifle Teams Finish High

Nebraska Rifle team took part in National Rifle Association sectional match held at Iowa City last Saturday. Twenty teams were entered from South Dakota, Illinois, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska, Iowa, Wisconsin.

Nebraska University entered two teams that finished third and fourth behind South Dakota and Missouri.

Third-place team members were Robert Beninger, Roger Walker, Tom Berry, Robert Saathoff, and Lowell Eck. Clifford Baade, Gary Nabor, James Harlow, Stephen Brocky, and Craig Schainost were on the fourth-place team.
