Patriotism Engulfs University

Plans In '20's Mean More Room, Buildings

By Frank Partsch Senior Staff Writer

The University joined with the state and the nation in spirited patriotism during the First World War; guided by Chancellor Samuel Avery's example and eloquent messages of support to the Allied cause, the students held frequent drives, victory parades and various other projects to back the war effort both financially and with mor-

The mood at the University in 1917 was one of sacrifice of personal comforts. Interfraternity Council and Panhellenic Council limited the number of house parties to two per year, at the request of the Chancellor.

Avery himself, because of his knowledge in the field of chemistry, was called to Washington and became a major in the chemical corps.

The DAILY NEBRASKAN carried daily stories of former students now on the western front in Europe as well as frequent items of various star football players whose induction made the outlook for the year quite dim.

In spite of the enthusiasm shown by the student groups and the Chancellor's spirited gems of patriotic Inspiration, the University did not present a united front in supporting the war. The complete story of a faculty split and subsequent loyalty investigations is told by Dr. Robert Manley, assistant professor of history, in his thesis, "The Nebraska State Council of Defense.

During the war feelings ran so high that anyone who did not loudly proclaim the cause for democracy was suspected of being a German sympathizer, and this was often enough of an offense to cause an investigation by the Council of Defense.

> Two parties developed among the faculty, both including prominent professors. The "war party" was behind the president completely while the "peace party" took more of a pacifist attitude. The "peace party" was not necessarily pro-German; many of its members merely objected to the hell and fire extremes that the expression of loyalty had come to at statements by these men against the Council of Defense caused an involved in-

Chancellor Avery

vestigation of the faculty.

Fallowing a dispute over whether the Council or the Regents should be responsible for investigating the faculty, the Regents held an open hearing on 12 charges of dis-

Of the twelve, five were asked to resign on the grounds of disloyalty.

The DAILY NEBRASKAN 1917-18 carried frequent stories of dreaded epidemics. In 1917 several cases of smallpox resulted in a decree by Avery that all students be vaccinated immeniately.

The Spanish influenza epidemic of 1918 struck the University with more severity, and the DAILY NEBRAS-KAN announced the deaths of several students per week until the school was closed under quarantine for two

The 20's saw another surge of building on campus, which, according to Manley, was emarkable because times were not as prosperous in the state as generally believed. Buildings erected before 1930 were Morrill Hall, Teachers College, Andrews Hall, the Coliseum, Bessey Hall, the power plant, the Stadium, Avery Lab and Social Sciences Hall.

For the first time the University moved beyond its original four block home, and a number of complex plans were designed for future expansion, including grandiose dormitory complexes (there were no dormitories at the University until several years later), malls and recreation

Manley says that one of these plans considered the columns as a perfect backdrop for an outdoor theatre. The columns had been donated to the University in 1922 by the Burlington Railroad. In the years since they were moved from the old Burlington station to the head of the 12th street they have become a source of several undying tradition.

The gates at the columns were once part of a fence that surrounded the entire campus. The fence now encloses

In 1925 University Hall was condemned again as being from a politically little-known pha, a sophomore Spanish man Regents' scholar and unfit for occupancy. After repairmen had torn into the building they reported that most of the old structure was beyond help. The Regents ordered it to be razed except

The DAILY NEBRASKAN carried a day by day account of the repairs. Sentiment was very strong for the original University, and Chancellor Avery proposed that a bronze model of the hall be built in a garden on the site after it was completely razed.

The years 1915-1930 are a study in contrasts. The DAILY NEBRASKAN alternately praised enthusiasm and attacked apathy. It was a time of strong class unity with the yearly olympic games determining the extent that the seniors would dare to be supreme or the freshmen to scoff at the sophomores.

Although the color is different the thought was the same befind the freshman beanie announcement in the paper of Sept. 12, 1917. "Freshmen, start your year off right by buying a green cap and helping uphold a tradition. The green cap is not a mark of disgrace; it is a sign of class spirit. You will not be laughed at if you have one - you might be laughed at if you don't.

The ROTC program was a continued source of friction in the DAILY NEBRASKAN, and frequent letters and editorials both pro and con can be found in papers from this period. Faculty quarrelling created tense situations periodically, culminating in occasional resignations.

Where the years preceding World War I had been a time of maturing in prestige and ability, the years following the war were concerned with physical growth, and comparatively little classroom building has been done since.

RAILROADS AND CEMETERIES-The familiar columns were denated to the University in 1922 by the Burlington Railroad. The gates were once part of a fence that surrounded the entire campus. The fence now encloses Wyuka Cemetery.

Daily Mebraskan

Vol. 77, No. 74

The Daily Nebraskan

Friday, March 13, 1964

-FORMING ADVISORY GROUP-

By Priscilla Mullins Junior Staff Writer

The Fraternity Managers gram for next year. Several of the professors, however, had been quoted Association (FMA) commit-Association (FMA) committee and contracts for the industry the work is to purchase better participating will be signed bakery, dairy, frozen foods many problems, was forced as defending, praising or bemoaning the German creed and its aims. Public

Son Puts

Senator Barry Goldwater's

name was officially entered in the Nebraska Republican presidential primary yesterday by his 23-year-old son,

Goldwater is the only Republican to be filed for the primary before yesterday's

In speaking to a group of University students last night,

Mike Goldwater stressed that Republicans should vote for

Republicans and Democrats

for Democrats in the coming elections. He said that his fa-

Mike Goldwater.

deadline.

candidates.

ference.

1961 as a co-operative buying quality products at a reason- after that bids will be let near Easter, ware, janitor supplies, paper, organization, is now engaged letting bids to the various living planning its buying pro- ing units on campus. The foods, eggs, lumber, hard- next year. The object of the committee and contracts for the houses canned goods and flowers. clude meat in its purchasing able price. At present the The products to be includ- and laundry, which are pres- to drop it. committee is concerned with ed in next year's program are ently being supplied, the oth-

The committee tried to in-

A questionnaire is now beng circulated in an attempt to determine the volume of products to offer suppliers for next year.

At present, an advisory council is being formed. This council will consist of two faculty members, two businessmen and two committee members of FMA. The purpose of the council will be to guide FMA in its future and to aid in its business tactics, so they will be ethical.

The committee for this year is composed of Doyle Kauk, chairman, Karen Gunlicks, Sandra McDowell, Bob Kerry, Richard Decker, Mike Jeffry, Sam Baird, Jerry Delzell, Rich Johnson, Jim Cada and Bill Coufal.

According to Karen Gunlicks, committee member, 'The FMA program can blossom into an association which would include all house purchases, a central bookkeeping office and a delivery station."

ther was out to get the Re-publican votes and would not Eight University coeds have | Suzi Trammell, Kappa Del- | Memorial scholarship and a

MISS E-WEEK-Finalists are (front row, left to right) Suzanne Young, Vicki Weber,

Suzi Trammell, Sandra Meistrell, (back row) Vicki Cline, Kay Johnson, Donna High-

blast any other Republicans about Goldwater support in the South, Mike said, "My lection was made by a com- Sondra Meistrell, Gamma father has lost a few votes mittee of the student honor- Phi Beta, junior English ma- er E-Week, the annual enin the South since Kennedy's ary and professional engineer- jor in Teachers College.

land and Jerri Chaloupka.

personality.

Mike, a banker in Arizona Finalists are: Suzanne Young, Alpha Del- Theta, a freshman journalism and a University of Arizona graduate, credited Henry ta Pi, a sophomore National major in Arts and Sciences. graduate, credited Henry ta Pi, a sophomore National Inajor in Donna Highland, Alpha Chi Cabot Lodge's victory in New Defense scholarship winner Donna Highland, Alpha Chi Will Appear Hampshire to the fact that and an art major in Teachers Omega, a junior art major he was a favorite son there, College. major in Arts and Sciences. holder of the Ida Bengston

In answering a question been named finalists in the ta, a junior sociology and medical technology major in that it will make a dif- on the basis of beauty and Regents' scholar and home open to the public on April 30.

economics major. Kay Johnson, Kappa Alpha in Teachers College.

Arts and Sciences. The winner will preside ov- Not Seen gineering and architecture assassination, but not enough ing societies at the University Vicki Cline, a sophomore open house. Displays will be

J-Students he was a favorite son there, College. while the Arizona senator was Vicki Weber, Zeta Tau Al- Jerri Chaloupka, a fresh- In Ad Clinic

A second annual "Meet the Pro's" clinic for adver- Nebraska tax problem could tising students is being held be lightened by the institution today in Omaha. As part of a three per cent sales of the two-day advertising tax to replace the present clinic, three University jour-nalism students will present raise enough money to pay a panel discussion on "The the costs of state government Ethics of Advertising."

Riggs, and Sally Wilcox will He added that 40 per cent be panel members, and Al- of the state budget is present-

Some of the topics to be discussed during the Friday and Saturday sessions include: "Advertising Oppor-tunities in A D a ily Newspaper," "Opportunities in Consumer Advertising," "Opportunities in Radio," and "Opportunities in Public Relations."

We don't accept them someone else will. It has kept on until now we can't get away from it," he continued.

Burney, who has flied to because we know that if we don't accept them someone else will. It has kept on until now we can't get away from it," he continued. lations."

vision departments, accord- system of the nation. ing to Book.

ticipate.

By Burney Nebraska cannot expect a tax cut in the near future if state expenditures increase at the rate predicted by experts on the fiscal situation, Lt. Gov. Dwight Burney told the members of Delta Theta Phi honorary law fraternity last

The long time legislator and former governor said that the and leave some to give to the David Longinaker, Eleanor schools," he said.

bert Book, associate professor ly received from the federal of journalism, will serve as government on a matching funds basis. "Either we must match these funds or say that we don't want them," he commented.

"We are taking the funds now because we know that if

Burney, who has filed for the Republican gubernatorial There will be several tours nomination, said that big to Omaha advertising depart-ments, and radio and tele-are breaking the financial

Concerning the University About 20 University adver- budget, Burney said that any tising students are scheduled increase in funds must come to attend the clinic. Over 100 from either the state or the students from 70 colleges and federal government. "We aluniversities in Nebraska, ready accept too much feder-Iowa, Kansas and South al aid to education," he said, Dakota are expected to par- "and we must avoid centralization of education."

HIGH SCHOOL STUDENTS INFEST CAMPUS

PHOTO BY DENNIS DEFRA WELCOME TO THE UNIVERSITY-N Club member Richard Hill greets a Grand Island fan, Bill Morlong. Morlong is one of thousands of high school boosters who have flocked to Lincoln for the State high school basketball tournaments. The lines grow as ticket sellers are kept busy.