Woods Fellowships Go To Three Professors

Woods Foundation Faculty Fellowships for the 1964-65 academic year were awarded to three University professors.

They are Dr. Robert Hough, associate professor of English; Dr. John Robinson, assistant professor of English, and Dr. Dallas Williams, professor of speech and dramatic art.

Hough will study the reform novel of the 1890's with special emphasis on novelist Harold Frederic, using source materials at Houghton Library at Harvard, and libraries at Utica and Syracuse New York, and the Library of Congress.

Robinson, a native of England who holds degrees from Oxford and Glasgow Universities, plans to return to England to complete a bibliography of theatrical literature. Robinson and his collaborator, J. F.

Arnett, are editing about 5,500 items of printed literature dealing with lives of actors, historians, and documents. Robinson has been at the University since 1961.

Williams, University faculty member since 1944 who has directed many dramatic productions, will study theater in England. He will see educational, community and church play as well as professional productions, and will study them from troupes to performance. He will be stationed with the British Drama League in London which is helping in the study.

Leaves of absence were granted by the Regents to Wilber Gaffney, Wallace Peterson, Donald Pierce and Gerald Anderson.

Gaffney, assistant professor of English, will take a leave of absence the second semester of 1964-65 to do research in England. He plans to study the works of Lewis Carroll and British systems of teaching composition.

Peterson, professor of economics, has accepted a Fulbright fellowship, to lecture for ten months at the School of Economics, and Economic Research in Athens, Greece.

This is the second Fulbright award Peterson has received. In 1957-58 he spent a year as a Fulbright Research Scholar at the Institute of Political and Economic Study, University of Paris.

Pierce, associate professor of engineering mechanics, will work toward his Ph.D. at the University of Colorado.

Anderson, assistant professor of architecture, will study architecture while on a world tour.

Emiel Christensen, professor of architecture and supervisor of community development in the Extension Division, will retire July 1.

In addition to his work at the University, Christensen is known for his activities in the field of community development. His is planning supervisor for the Nebraska Resources Division and vice-chairman of the Nebraska State Board of Examiners for professional engineers and architects.

He is a past president of the Columbus Rotary Club, past commander of the American Legion Post at Columbus and former Red Cross War Fund and Disaster Chairman in Platte County.

He is a member of the American Institute of Architects, American Society of Planning Officials and the Community Planning Association of Canada.

Christensen has written many articles on farm and small town planning problems and potentials for rural magazines and weekly newspapers.

Regents Accept Research Grants

Research and training grants totaling $283,321 were accepted by the University Board of Regents Friday afternoon.

The funds represent those received through the office of Dr. Roy Holly, vice chancellor for research and professional education, during the period April 8-29. They include $182,077 for research, $3,800 for fellowships and $97,444 for training.

Heading the list of new training funds was a grant of $91,412 from the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare for psychiatric internships in the department of neurology and psychiatry at the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute. Dr. Bulent Tunakan is in charge of the intern program.

An $80,269 research grant was received from the National Institutes for Health for research in the community services division of the Nebraska Psychiatric Institute under the direction of Dr. Thaddeus Krush. This program involves testing the effectiveness of area mental health centers and creating community vigilance to the signs and symptoms, treatment, and rehabilitation of the mentally ill.

Other major grants: —$16,152 from the U.S. Public Health Service to Dr. Patricia Weymouth, department of biochemistry and nutrition, for research on the thymic ribonuclease and x-ray induced thymoma. This project is concerned with the way in which cancer begins in animal tissue.

—$12,600 from the U.S. Public Health Service for research by Dr. D. M. S. Wheeler of the department of chemistry for research on the general syntheses of diphenol acids (compounds derived from resins of pine trees which might have application in disease treatment).

—$10,800 from the American Stores Packing Company for research by Dr. James Kendrick of the department of agricultural economics for studies on produce formulation and production control of meat products applicable to midwestern packing plants.

Novelist Discusses Homeland

'Three Religions Forge Spain'

The image of Spain is bitter.

This was the opinion of Camilo Jose Cela last week in his speech at Sheldon Art Gallery. "Spain does not recognize its malady, nor does it resolve to combat it, nor does it even attempt it," said the man who is considered to be Spain's top living novelist.

"The Spanish essence, its ultimate 'quid,' is perhaps to live fighting against life itself and against death," said Cela.

The essence of Spain is forged in the communal life of the Moors, Christians and Jews during the medieval centuries, he said.

"The modern Spaniard makes use of the three medieval, confused and deformed ways of life. This makes a battlefield of his heart. The discord affects each Spaniard one Spaniard and another."

The fighting among the three religious groups has developed a centrifugal force evidence in exiles, expulsions and emigrations, according to Cela. "Spain is not in decadence," he said, "but it is a decadence."

Cela said that Spain's misfortune is that the governing minorities are condemned to solitude and do not help the population. Twentieth century Spain has produced a celebrated group of artists, thinkers and scientists, he said, but its technology, science and political institutions are not well developed.

Voluntary ROTC Gets Enthusiastic Welcome

By Travis Hiner
 Junior Staff Writer

The announcement that Reserve Officer Training Corps program will not be mandatory any more brought great shouts of enthusiasm and little criticism. Many students felt that this step should have been taken long ago.

One advanced ROTC officer said that he thought the programs would now be run better and officers would be taught more effectively. This way the first two years won't be wasted as they were in the old program.

Another officer said however that if he hadn't been exposed to ROTC his first two years he probably wouldn't have entered the advanced program. He didn't think the student should have to make the decision whether he was going to enter ROTC or not while he was still in high school.

Mandatory ROTC's being relevant and necessary was the opinion of the minority. The general reactions were such things as "yeah," "good deal!" and "it's about time!"

One student commented that before he came to school and was required to take ROTC he was impartial to the armed services. But after taken ROTC courses for two years he wants nothing to do with the service and he will try everything he can, including getting married, in order to stay out.

Others related their feelings on how stupid and irrelevant dressing up and marching an hour a week had been to them. Also they felt that ROTC classes were a wasted hour every week.

Percentage wise the number of students who go into advanced ROTC is small compared to the number that quit after two years. For this large number that quit, the two years of mandatory ROTC was a waste of time.

Unionizing— Joe, Eddy Will Perform On Thursday

By Bill Harding

For the first couple of days this week, students will have time to recover from Ivy Day and any other big events that they may have participated in last week; but when Thursday rolls around, they will, once again, wend their way to the Union, to listen to Joe and Eddy.

The up-and-coming young pair will be here for one performance at 7:30, and tickets, $1.25 and $1.50, are now on sale in the Union. This show will probably take on all the aspects of a spring woodsie with guitars, with certain modifications. The spirit and enthusiasm that these two put into their music is so catching that it all but engulfs their audience. For proof of this statement, listen to either of their latest records: "There's a Meeting Here Tonight" and "Swing Down Chariot." This will be a great show and our campus is fortunate to have such talented performers as these.

On Friday, spirit and enthusiasm once again takes over the Union with Jazz 'n Java which features the Sig Ep Combo this week. Be sure to stop in and renew your U.F.A.C. Card (Union Friday Afternoon Club).
