New Bus Needed

A year ago the University, in cooperation with the City business, established an inter-campus bus to shuttle students back and forth between ag and city campuses.

With the advent of the bus, came the rule that parking stickers would not be issued for both campuses, therefore forcing the students to rely on the bus transportation.

Monday morning students again waited confidently for big red bomb to come wheeling around the corner. Come it did. But when it came the students, standing in front of the Nebraska Center, were informed that the bus was full and no more passengers would be taken on.

This left them stranded on ag campus at 7:40 a.m., with an eight o'clock class on city campus.

If the University is going to limit parking of cars to one campus only, the bus line must be reliable. Students are here to attend classes and should not be forced by a bus to forego that duty.

True, the bus is crowded. It was crowded last year. If bus drivers are going to limit the number of students, another bus should be added during the peak hours.

Letters Welcomed

The Daily Nebraskan welcomes letters to the editors from its readers. Letters should be addressed to The Editor, Room 51, Student Union, University of Nebraska, Lincoln. Or they may be brought into the office and given to the editor.

Anonymous letters are not printed under any circumstances. The Daily Nebraskan must know the name and address of all writers. Persons not wishing to have their names published are permitted to use nom de plume but the names must be given to the editor. These names will be kept in the editor's office.

At the discretion of the editor, any bonafide student, faculty member or member of the University administration may be given the name of any person writing under a pen name provided that the request is submitted in writing to the editor.

If the editor refuses to reveal the name, an appeal may be made in writing to the Subcommittee on Student Publications.

The Daily Nebraskan will reserve the right to condense all letters to the editor.

By PAT DRAKE

By way of introduction, it would appear that an explanation of my column heading would be in order, which at the same time would give me some space in which to spill the beans, so to say, about myself. Yes, boys and girls, I write on the walls.

I have written, am writing and shall continue to write (or scratch) on walls, pillars, buildings, underpasses, inside of matchbook covers, behind the drapes, on top of . . . well, no sense in depleting my supply of hangouts this early in the game.

The next point to make is what? You name it and I write it: purring poetry, piecemeal formulae, sensuous satire, appropriate aphorisms, vague vulgarities, innocuous innuendoes, chauvinistic trivia, graphic-gory stories, jungles, jangles and all of the general graphs that is ah . . . generally un-publishable.

However, (before the copyreader has a cerebral thrombosis) I always disguise any and everything which might have a tinge of offhand offensiveness. I certainly wouldn't want to dissuade popular opinion or unjustly criticize the anomalies of contemporary society (that by the way includes all youse searching for truth, beauty and all that jazz at the university).

But whatever I write, and this is dictum, I don't want some baggy-eyed, snot-nosed kid following me along my way and telling me that I really don't have any clothes on after all, because I went to the best tailor in the Capitol and he assured me that the threads (robes, cloaks, garbs) were absolutely, unconditionally the best that an education could buy.

What I am getting at is that I suppose I will write about many and sundry subjects with an emphasis upon the Fine Arts. Oh, of course, the parking problems and kissing on Sheldon's Italian marble steps (can you imagine the audacity?) and other improbable catastrophes which beset and bewilder faculty members and students alike.

And what's more, the anonymous 'they' told me that around these here parts, a man could say just about what he damned well pleased, as long as . . . ah it or you (they should be the same, but oft times ain't) didn't disagree with . . . ah . . . ah with . . . well now don't be stirring up any trouble or you can just git on down the road. I quickly said a short prayer, paid allegiance to you-know-what and sent Mom a post card.

Well anyway, just to give you something to think about while I tug this tote of books back to the dorm, I ran upon this the other day scribbled on a fireplug near Bessey Hall:

"For the beginning is assuredly the end—since we know nothing, pure and simple, beyond our own complexities." Rather puzzling, isn't it? By the way, this is what I have treasured most about my education (treasured . . . meaning, locked up in a vault); I am vaguely beginning to understand what's written on the wall.

Squee's Squabbles

I notice there is an announcement of a Youth for Goldwater meeting tonight. That's funny.

Last year the statement was that there would be no Youth for Goldwater club this year. If Goldwater doesn't get the nomination, there is no purpose for us, they said. If he does, the whole Republican party will be working for Goldwater's election.

Well, Goldwater was nominated. The whole Republican party is working for his election. Why does this announcement suddenly appear.

It seems that if the Goldwaterites want their man elected, they would do everything in their power to unite the party. This does not appear to be the proper way to accomplish this mammoth feat.

Editors Note: Albert E. Hahn ran for Nebraska governor in the primary this spring.

Dear Editor:

Mass murder on our highways is like nothing the state of Nebraska has ever seen before. There will be nearly 400 fatalities this year.

An uneasy feeling permeates the state. Giant loopholes in our legal system usually let the fatality driver slip through unpunished.

A state-wide emergency now exists. Loosed and unchecked as a giant mass murderer of tremendous proportions in the form of our fatality drivers.
